VETERANS MARCH IN CELEBRATION OF ARMISTICE DAY

Military and Civic Organizations Take Part in Parade Through Downtown Streets.

LEGION LUNCHEON OPENS OBSERVANCE

Gov. Stark Among Speakers at Laying of Cornerstone of New Armory at Spring and Market.

Veterans of the World War, military and civic organizations, marched through downtown streets this afternoon, in parade which formed the chief community observance of Armistice day, nineteenth anniversary of the cessation of hostilities Nov. 11, 1918.

The parade followed observance of a moment of silence at 11 a.m., and a largely attended noonday luncheon of the American Legion at Hotel Jefferson. It preceded the cornerstone-laying of the new $1,350,000 armory of the 138th Infantry, National Guard of Missouri, at Market street and Spring avenue.

Assembling at Twelfth boulevard and Washington avenue, the parade moved east on Washington to Broadway, south to Market street and west to Fifteenth street, passing a reviewing stand on Memorial Plaza.

On the Sidelines. The lines of spectators, encouraged by fine weather, were closely formed along both sides of the parade route. The Legion posts showed a larger turnout than in former years. Most of the men were in dress uniforms, some in civilian clothes, but some were in dress uniforms.

The Sons of the American Legion, most of them boys of high school age, were in line in larger numbers than before. Some of these groups accompanied Legion posts, and furnished drum corps and buglers.

The start was delayed until 2:50 p.m. The line of marchers proved to be longer than the short downtown parade route, and the first section was disbanding at the reviewing stand while the rear was still drawn up on Twelfth, on either side of Locust, waiting to start. Spectators were thickest on the blocks at either end of the route, and fewer on Broadway. Along the route, applause was given to the veterans' organizations, while the militia and college groups evoked only scattered cheering.

Sixth Infantry Absent. Absence of the Sixth Infantry, on a test movement in the Southwest, made the parade less martial than in former years. The 138th Infantry was the principal organization in line.

Ceremony Laying. Speakers in the ceremony at the Armory site were Gov. Lloyd C. Stark, Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, Gen. Eugene J. Spencer and Gen. Stephen E. Lowe, both retired, Adjutant-General Lewis M. Means and Col. Lawrence C. Kingsland of the 138th. A regimental dress parade followed.

Gov. Stark, in his speech at the new Armory site, reviewed the history of the First Regiment, National Guard of Missouri, historic predecessor of the 138th Infantry. He paid a tribute to the 138th for its record of bravery in the Argentine and other major engagements, its casualties through the war numbering 311 killed and 1222 wounded. He spoke of the fact that the third battalion of the present regiment is composed of companies in Fayette, Kirksville, Hannibal, Marshall and Chillicothe.

"Temporary" for 30 Years. He said the new Armory, replacing the "temporary" Grand-Market building in use for nearly 30 years, should serve as a centrally located community hall and meeting place. He said that of its cost, $350,000 was from Federal PWA funds, and $100,000 from a municipal bond issue.

Major Dickmann recited the exploits of the old First Regiment in the Indian wars and the Mexican War, and its service in the Spanish-American War. He mentioned the fact that the bond issue for the Armory was voted in 1934, under his first administration as Mayor.

In the downtown parade, the flag of Ransom Post, Grand Army of the Republic, was carried by Squadron 62, Sons of the American Legion. The flag was presented to the squadron June 11, 1936, by Eugene R. Latta, commander of one of two surviving members of Ransom Post. The other then surviving member, Clark V. Graves, died soon

WILLIAM GREEN DISCUSSES WAGES WITH ROOSEVELT

Tells President There Is Strong Sentiment in A. F. L. for Standards by Statute.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was called to the White House today to discuss wage and hour legislation with President Roosevelt. Afterwards he expressed doubt about the workability of an annual wage for building trades mechanics, which he said the President felt was worthy of consideration.

During his conversation with the President Green outlined the action taken by the A. F. of L. convention in criticizing the National Labor Relations Board and said he would prepare a detailed statement of cases for the President's consideration.

Green said that while no commitments were made he told the President there was strong sentiment in the A. F. of L. for the principle of fixing minimum wages and maximum hours by statute rather than by a Federal board.

TWO INDIAN SCALPS WORN BY ENGLISH WOMAN AUTHOR

Given to Her by Man Who Took Them in Battle Nearly 60 Years Ago.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Wearing the scalps of two long-dead Indian warriors, Mrs. Claire Sheridan, British author and sculptress, sailed for England yesterday. The scalps dangled like epaulets from the bright yellow Indian blanket which Mrs. Sheridan wore as a coat.

She explained: "It's no worse to wear these scalps than it is to wear a bit of ribbon on your chest to testify that you have been responsible for killing men in the wars of the white people."

3 WEST VIRGINIA COUNCILMEN INDICTED ON GRAFT CHARGES

Three Others in Clarksburg, Who Resigned When Arrested, Are Accused by Grand Jury.

By the Associated Press.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 11.—The Harrison County grand jury indicted three City Councilmen and three former Councilmen today on charges growing from negotiations for letting of a municipal garage contract and for misfeasance in office.

The six are Frank O'Day, M. B. Criss, Joseph A. Oliverio, Frank F. Underwood, Thomas F. Cornwell and Ray E. Titchenal.

Oliverio, Cornwell and Titchenal resigned after they were arrested and charged by State Trooper C. E. Musgrave with trying to get money from him in return for their influence in letting of the contract. Musgrave said he had posed as agent for a fictitious Hunting-ton firm.

CIO DEMANDS AID FOR RISING ROLL OF CITY'S JOBLESS

11,500 REPORTED LAID OFF HERE

Steel, Electrical and Garment Plants Affected—Slump Ascribed to "Economic Tories."

The Industrial Union Council of CIO union representatives declared last night that 11,500 workers in St. Louis steel, electrical manufacturing and cotton garment manufacturing plants had been laid off recently and called for special sessions of the Board of Aldermen and State Legislature to provide additional relief funds.

The council's resolution said steel plants had laid off 6000; electrical manufacturing plants 2500; cotton garment manufacturers 3000, and that "thousands" had been added to the ranks of unemployed by various other industries.

It charged that the current slump was a political and social sit-down strike" designed by "economic Tories" to prevent progressive legislation at the coming session of Congress and to "cut the budget."

This resolution said, would further retard progress, deprive millions of workers of their jobs, and throw hundreds of thousands of PWA and WPA workers out of their jobs.

Steel production nationally has been dropping for two months, and manufacturers have attributed the decline to lack of orders and decreases in backlog of unfilled orders accumulated early in the year.

St. Louis electrical manufacturers have said the current unemployment in their industry results from seasonal conditions and the reluctance of buyers to place new orders because of the general decline in business.

Man's Right to Job.

"It is our belief," the resolution continued, "that every American has a right to a job, and, lacking a job through no fault of his own, it is the duty of the Federal, State and Municipal governments to provide him with work or adequate subsistence."

Asserting that "human rights are above property rights, and in the present emergency the needs of the people must become the first concern of the Federal, city and State governments," the resolution demanded that "the Mayor of St. Louis and the Governor of Missouri lay aside all excuses and discussions of legislative limitations imposed upon them and take such emergency measures as could be authorized by special sessions of the city and State governing bodies to provide relief in sufficient quantities to the people."

The resolution said: "We demand that the Mayor of St. Louis and the Governor of Missouri lay aside all excuses and discussions of legislative limitations imposed upon them and take such emergency measures as could be authorized by special sessions of the city and State governing bodies to provide relief in sufficient quantities to the people."

Thousands of St. Louis families, the council said, are denied the bare necessities of civilized existence because of the "shameful inadequacy" of relief funds.

GRADUAL BUT MARKED CONTRACTION IN W P A EMPLOYMENT

Accompanying the curtailment of relief funds, which has resulted from the city's decision not to make further relief appropriations and the State's insistence that it will not meet more than 60 per cent of the need, has been a gradual, but marked contraction in WPA employment.

The relief money available for St. Louis in November is one-third less than was spent in November of last year, and there are one-third fewer WPA jobs.

L. E. Greathouse, WPA administrator for St. Louis and the council, said that the bond issue for the Armory was voted in 1934, under his first administration as Mayor.

The reduction had come about, Greathouse said, without "forced dismissals," except last July when the total employed at the beginning of the month, 17,953, was reduced to about 15,000 to conform with the district's new quota still in effect.

Except for the July reduction, Greathouse said, the total declined because WPA workers quit to accept jobs in private industry or cases—official confirmation was lacking.

THREE MORE REPORTED IN DISFAVOR IN RUSSIA

Intourist Director, Plane Designer and Collective Farm Promoter Named.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Nov. 11.—Three prominent Soviet figures are reported in foreign circles to be the latest victims of Government disfavor.

Removal of V. A. Kurz, director-general of Intourist, official Soviet tourist agency with offices in principal cities abroad, is confirmed by his office. Foreign acquaintances heard that Kurz was arrested early in November after his apartment was raided, but—as in a majority of cases—official confirmation was lacking.

EDWIN S. HARRISON MISSING SINCE SEPT. 30, DROWNED

Body of Curtis Manufacturing Co. Sales Manager Taken From River About 9800 South.

REPORT OF LEAP OFF BRIDGE IS RECALLED

County Coroner Suggests He Was Man Who Was Seen to Jump From the Eads Span.

The body of Edwin S. Harrison, divisional sales manager for the Curtis Manufacturing Co., who had been missing since Sept. 30, was taken from the Mississippi River today.

Two fishermen found the body about 9800 south. In Harrison's wallet they found a credit card of a gasoline company bearing his name and address. They telephoned his home and Charles Clafin Allen Jr., attorney and cousin of Harrison's wife, went to the river bank to identify the body. He directed that it be taken to the Wagoner undertaking establishment, 3621 Olive street.

Coroner John J. O'Connell of St. Louis County, notified by the undertaker, recalled that a man had been seen to leap from the Eads Bridge on the afternoon of Sept. 30, a short time after Harrison had left his home at 109 Arundel place, Clayton. The Coroner suggested that Harrison's body was that of the man who jumped from the bridge.

Casinos, theaters and restaurants in the capital functioned with the usual animation and there was no outward sign of resistance to the swift move which Vargas himself said was inspired in part by fear of armed revolution.

Outwardly, this largest of South American nations seemed to have accepted calmly the decree which abolished the democratic form of government and set up one modeled in many respects after the corporate system of totalitarian European nations.

HELP OF LABOR TO BE SOUGHT FOR HOUSING MOVE

Group That Sees Roosevelt to Suggest Lower Wage With Increased Period for Work.

PLAN IS TO INTEREST PRIVATE CAPITAL

Gov. Eccles of Reserve Board Says Hope Is to Bring About Nationwide Program.

By the Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—President Roosevelt conferred yesterday with a group of industrial and banking leaders about a proposed nationwide home building program to be financed privately.

Industrial executives present were S. Sloan Colt of the Bankers' Trust Co., New York; Gerard Swope of General Electric; Robert E. Wood of Sears, Roebuck and Co., and Henry C. Turner of the Turner Construction Co., New York.

Will See Labor Leaders.
These men were asked to take up with labor leaders and construction material leaders two obstacles to home building: The high cost of materials and the wages of building trades workers. It was suggested that these workers might accept a lower hourly wage if the number of weeks' employment would be increased.

Although the program under discussion does not relate to the new Federal sun-clearance project, the Federal Housing Administration may become the central agency. Legislation may be required to permit Government co-operation, Eccles said.

"This group," Eccles told reporters, "was brought in to discuss an over-all housing program that would involve the use entirely of private capital. It is our hope to be able to develop a program that will be national in scope."

In response to questions he said the plan dealt with "houses for sale and houses for rent, large and small," that "naturally" the purpose was "to get a large volume of building next year."

Attention to Rental Projects.
A spokesman for the Federal Housing Administration said that agency was now devoting special attention to large scale rental housing projects.

The F H A's function is to insure mortgages taken by the builder with private financing concerns. It will insure such mortgages up to 80 per cent of the value of the building. But, to be eligible for such insurance, the project must meet F H A standards, including stipulations that the building meet Eccles' statement that legislation might be necessary was taken to mean that he had in mind some relaxation of the restrictions imposed by the F H A, as one means of encouraging builders.

DIPLOMATS STUDY NEXT STEP IF JAPAN WON'T TALK PEACE

Envys of U. S., Britain, France and China at Brussels Conference Reach No Decision.

By the Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11.—Envys of the United States, Britain, France and China attending the Brussels conference on the Far-Eastern war met today to consider a possible policy in the event Japan refuses to talk peace with China.

Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, China's conference delegate, said a useful exchange of views had taken place, but that nothing concrete developed.

The four-power talk followed an early morning visit by Norman H. Davis, United States delegate to the conference, and Britain's delegate, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, to Paul H. Spaak, Foreign Minister of the resigned Government of Prime Minister van Zeeland.

None of the leading conference delegates joined in the Belgian Armistice day tribute before the flame of the unknown soldier's tomb, but Eden attended a brief service at the British church and laid a wreath on the Anglo-Belgian memorial.

'HYPOCRISY,' CRIES MAN AT ARMISTICE SERVICE IN LONDON

He appeared almost unconscious when police half-carried, half-pushed him into Downing street. The crowds were kept back with greatest difficulty.

At the ambulance station he was given first aid, then taken into the Dominions office.

Witnesses said the man had one hand raised as he dashed through the ranks of the sailors. He seemed to trip, they said, just before two policemen grabbed him.

Queen Mother Mary and Queen Elizabeth looked down aghast from a Home Office window until bugles sounded reveille and the voices of the multitude swelled up in "God Save the King."

were taken by regional military commanders.

Vargas, in whose hands thus was concentrated more power than existed in Brazil since the Braganza emperors two generations ago, declared that party government, as under the old constitution, increased the "sombre likelihood of the class struggle."

The new constitution provides that the incumbent president continue until a plebiscite held at his discretion. Then "if the plebiscite is favorable to the constitution," the President's term would end. No provision is made for an unfavorable vote. Meanwhile, Vargas would rule by decree.

Centralization of Power.

The new constitution reserves to the chief executive the right in principle to initiate legislation and expressly forbids either the Chamber of Deputies or the Federal Council in the bicameral legislature to maneuver advantages to their respective regions.

The body would be elected half by workers' syndicates and half by employers' groups, such as commercial, industrial and professional associations.

It is provided that the president may run for re-election if nominated as he chooses and he is expressly authorized to designate the candidate to succeed him if the candidate chosen by a carefully constituted electoral college does not suit him. Under the old constitution Vargas could not have been re-elected.

Gives Reason for Action.

The President said the 1934 constitution was "based on classic moulds of liberalism" but showed "egregious failings" and was "aimed at a reality that no longer existed."

"In these circumstances the capacity of the regime to resist disintegration disappears and the peaceful dispute at the polls is transferred to the field of aggressive turbulence and clashes of arms," the President said.

He spoke of "new party forms rising throughout the world" which, he said, "endanger our institutions, requiring urgent reinforcement of central government."

Vargas touched on the problem presented by Jose Antonio Flores da Cunha, who, before he was deposed as Governor of Rio Grande do Sul, was master of a private army thought to number 30,000. Flores da Cunha had been the chief supporter of De Salles Oliveira, whose presidential candidacy Vargas called a "timid attempt" at democracy.

Referring to the part Flores da Cunha played in the presidential race, now definitely ended, Vargas said "the electoral preparations were replaced in certain states by military preparations which caused grave damage that the nation already had suffered because of the uncertainty and instability created by factions."

Camps Chief Collaborator.
Promulgation of the new constitution was announced the morning by Campos after a meeting at the presidential palace. Campos, chief collaborator in drafting the document, was sworn in only Tuesday to fill the key post in the Vargas cabinet.

Campos first came into national prominence after the revolt of 1930, which was headed by Vargas. At that time he organized the "October Legion," a khaki shirt movement to "safeguard principles of the revolution."

Campos, in an interview, pointed to the consultative council on national economy as the most striking feature of the new constitution.

He said by requiring members to "have shown technical fitness in some branch of the nation's economic life" that Brazil was "trying to avoid the abusive nature of present economic bureaus by centralizing responsibility on the workers and producers."

How Federal Power Gradually Has Been Extended in Brazil.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 11.—The Buenos Aires Herald, an English language newspaper, in an editorial on Brazil says today: "Under the guise of suppressing Communism—which never had a footing in Brazil—every decent liberal has been persecuted or jailed. And now a puppet Congress has fallen under the ban of a dictator who a year or two ago was so filled with liberal traditions that he headed a move-

LOYALIST RAIDERS GO THROUGH REBEL LINES IN ARAGON

Catalanians Report Capture of Two Positions in Tactics to Prevent Massing of Troops.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, French-Spanish Border, Nov. 11.—Catalanians seeking to prevent the Japanese from breaking through the insurgent line in northern Aragon, Government troops were said to have captured the latest model, but soon my air force will be supplemented by fast-fighting bombers of the latest type also, which can outmaneuver and outdistance these latest additions to the Japanese air force.

The Japanese failed to realize that although my air force is smaller in number of planes, yet many of our planes are flown by aviators trained by American and European experts. Soon my 'death' and 'die' pilots will be unleashed. They are very eager to fly to Tokyo and although I shall issue strict orders for them not to bomb the city's non-combatants, Japan will soon have to send hundreds of these people from Nanking to the open country to encampments in sandy denuded rice fields. There they will be tended by corps of trained woman war workers who will organize the women and children into units. Food centers will be established and medical units set.

The insurgent communists today acknowledged Government assault at several points, but declared all were repulsed.

Dispatches from Port Bou, a Mediterranean town just south of the French frontier, said an insurgent plane dropped explosives around the Port Bou railroad station last night but only slight damage was reported.

Charged With Interference With Organization of Workers in Discharging Union Officer.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The New York Newspaper Guild announced last night that it had filed a complaint with the National Labor Relations Board, charging the New York Times with coercion and interference with the organization of employees, especially in discharging Leonard Goldsmith, ex-president of the newspaper office guild and leading organizer in the commercial departments of the Times.

The announcement said: "The New York Times with coercion and interference with the organization of employees, especially in discharging Leonard Goldsmith, ex-president of the newspaper office guild and leading organizer in the commercial departments of the Times."

WAR CORRESPONDENT
KILLED AT SHANGHAI

London Paper's Writer Shot
When Watching Battle
From Tower.

Associated Press
SHANGHAI, Nov. 11.—Pembroke Stephens, special correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, was killed today when watching the fighting in the Nantao quarter of Shanghai.

A. L. Thurwansky and P. Ansel, employees of French concession street car lines, were wounded. Japanese were attacking Chinese in a sandbagged machine-gun nest just outside the concession. With eight other foreigners, Stephens was watching the battle from the platform of the 200-foot French water tower, just inside the concession boundary. Suddenly, Japanese turned up their machine guns and hit the platform with many bullets.

Stephens and his wounded companions were found by Capt. Evans Carlson, United States marine observer, watching the battle.

"I was standing under the tower, outside the line of fire, watching Japanese attack the Chinese position at the Nantao extension of the 'Le Du Baill' Carlson said.

"I noticed bullets chipping the water's cement base. I looked up and saw pairs of feet sticking out from the platform below the tank. After 20 minutes of continuous machine-gun fire, during which hundreds of bullets struck the water tower and many whizzed on into the concession, Chinese soldiers began an evacuation.

"Many of them went into the concession to be disarmed. I remained the feet up above and went to the water tower to see if anything was wrong. I climbed up the tower and looked at the platform.

"Seven prostrate, terrified foreigners huddled together on the platform, covered with dirt and water. They got up when I told them the fighting was finished. Stephens lay still. Someone called for A. Richer, who pronounced him dead.

"Earlier, Richer had risked his life treating wounded while hundreds of bullets spattered around the area."

Two French policemen were wounded by flying shrapnel when Japanese attacked the Chinese stronghold at the junction of the Siekaw and Zehwei creeks.

POLITICAL PICKING DISQUALIFIES MAN
FOR MAIL CARRIER

Civil Service Excludes Candidate Whom Congressman Cannon Let Committee Name.

ONLY DEMOCRAT ON PIKE COUNTY LIST

New Group of Three Submitted for Clarksville Job, Including Two Rejected Republicans.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The appointment of a rural mail carrier at Clarksville, Mo., has been disapproved by the Civil Service Commission, after two other eligible candidates for the job had complained to the commission that there was "political consideration" involved in a practice, long followed by Congressman Clarence Cannon, of allowing members of the Democratic county committee in the Ninth Missouri District to pick the men he is to recommend for rural carriers.

The complaint was based on the action last July of five members of the Pike County Democratic Committee, who, at Cannon's direction, chose the successful candidate for a rural route lying in three townships, including Clarksville, which they represent on the county committee.

They chose a Democrat, Richard W. Middleton of Clarksville, from among the three eligible candidates certified by the Civil Service Commission, and sent his name to Cannon, who recommended his appointment to the Postoffice Department.

In due course Middleton received the appointment, but after the complaints of the other candidates were received, he was not assigned to duty, and the Civil Service Commission said today his status was that of a disqualified applicant.

Fourth Man Moved Up.

The candidate who made the fourth highest grade in the examinations for the job has been moved up with the other two, and the list of three men now eligible for appointment has been resubmitted to the Postoffice Department for consideration. Any one of the three may be aointed.

In letters of complaint sent to the commission, Everett E. Jaeger and Sam D. Thompson, Republican candidates who became eligible with Middleton for the job, contended that Middleton's selection by the Democratic committee was an act of "political consideration," contrary to civil service regulations, which provide in part:

"In all cases selections shall be made with sole reference to merit and fitness and without regard to political considerations. No inquiry shall be made as to the political or religious affiliations of any eligible, and no recommendation in any way based thereon shall be received, considered or filed by any officer concerned in making selections or appointments.

That no recommendations of any person who shall apply for office or place under the provisions of this act, which may be given by any Senator or member of the House of Representatives, except as to character or residence of the applicant, shall be received or considered by any person concerned in making examination or appointment under this act."

Civil Service Rules.

The civil service code does not require the appointment of the candidate making the highest grade. It specifies that the three highest shall be certified, leaving final selection open, thus, in practice, giving opportunity for political consideration through recommendation.

Also forwarded to the Civil Service Commission by the two unchallenged was a ballot on Cannon's official stationery, which had been sent to him by the Democratic committee for voting their choice of rural carrier.

It was headed, "Endorsement for Rural Carrier by Democratic Committee." It listed three certified candidates in alphabetical order without noting their party affiliation—known to the committee anyway—and without the grades. Thompson got the highest grade, Jaeger second and Middleton third.

In part, the ballot read: "The members of the County Committee are in closer touch with county affairs and in better position to know who is entitled to party recognition, and who is qualified to serve as rural carrier than any one outside the county."

Queen Receives D. Litt. Degree.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Queen Elizabeth received the degree of Doctor of Literature last night in the University College of London. King George VI watched as the university chancellor, the Earl of Athlone, Queen Mary's brother, draped a hood of scarlet over the black academic gown of the kneeling queen.

88 COCKER SPANIELS
ENTERED IN CLUB SHOW

Veiled Prophet Queen to Present Special Trophy for Best Dog Tonight.

A one-day show of Cocker Spaniels, an increasingly popular breed of dogs in America for pets and for exhibitions, opened this morning at the Gatesworth Hotel under sponsorship of the Cocker Spaniel Club of Greater St. Louis. Eighty-eight dogs were entered.

Judging of the 48 classes of entries will be concluded in a session this evening. At that time, after a parade of champions, Miss Nancy Lee Merrill, reigning Veiled Prophet Queen, will present a special trophy of the club to the best dog in the show.

Sixty-four special and cash prizes will be awarded at the conclusion of the show at 10 o'clock tonight, as will trophies valued by club members at $150. Winners in each division will gain five points toward a national championship rating.

Fred L. Clark of Racine, Wis., of the American Kennel Club, was judging all regular entries. A special event, the Children's Handling Class, was judged by Eric Banks of St. Louis. Only the children's ability to handle dogs in the show ring was considered.

Included in the entries, all of which are housed in stalls forming a square facing the judging stand in the hotel ballroom, are six champions. They are Champion Happy Helen of Stratford, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Hanks, 8009 Kingsbury avenue; Champion Shinyus of Stratford, Elsworth S. Bauman, 4605 Lindell boulevard; Champion Starless Night, H. P. Hoffmeister, Kirkwood; Champion Sand Spring Star, Silver Maple Farms, Webster Groves, and Champion Starless Lightning' Bill, Mrs. E. G. Starnes, Clayton.

The Cocker Spaniel Club, organized last January, now has 55 members. William J. Becker, 39 Summit place, Webster Groves, is president; F. F. Hanks, 7324 Robert avenue, is vice-president, and W. J. Kinsella Jr., Lincoln road, St. Louis County, is treasurer.

Cocker Spaniels have been listed at the top of the popularity list of dogs by show officials for the last year. At the annual Mississippi Valley Kennel Club show held last March, the 100 Spaniels at the show led the list of entries. They are suited both for pets and for retrievers.

LAST GOVERNMENT WITNESS HEARD IN OIL FIRMS' TRIAL

Accountant Submits, in Price-Fixing Case, List of Their Purchases From Small Refineries.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 11.—The Government concluded direct questioning of its final witness, a Federal accountant, today in its gasoline price-fixing case against 23 oil companies, three trade journals and 46 individuals.

W. J. Miller of Philadelphia, accountant for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, presented a series of tabulations purporting to show major oil companies' purchases of gasoline from small independent refineries in 1935 and 1936. The Government alleges such purchases were made at artificially raised prices as part of an illegal scheme to raise the price to jobbers and to consumers.

Miller testified his compilation listed more than 20,000 purchases by major companies.

The typewritten record in the case to date is nearly 5000 pages and 751 exhibits have been introduced.

MAN AND WIFE ARRESTED ON MANN ACT CHARGE

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Thornburg Detained on Detroit Warrant Under $5000 Bond.

Guy Walter Thornburg, a night club entertainer, and his wife, Mrs. Jean Thornburg, were detained by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation here on a warrant issued in Detroit last month charging them with conspiracy to violate the Mann Act by transporting a 17-year-old waitress from Toledo to Detroit.

Mrs. Thornburg, also a club entertainer, was arrested Nov. 1, when police were called after a disturbance in a tavern in the 5000 block of Delmar boulevard. Although she was released on bond almost immediately, and the disturbance charge was dismissed in Police Court next day, further investigation by detectives resulted in discovery of the Federal warrant and the re-arrest of her and her husband. Thornburg, who also uses the name Mike Thornburg, is 34 years old; his wife 27. They are held in city jail in default of $5000 bond each.

3 BROTHERS KILLED BY GAS

Found by Father on Birthday of a Fourth Son.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Nov. 11.—Edmund LaFerrriere, 12, went to the room of his three sons to call them for a celebration of their brother Donald's eighteenth birthday today and found them dead in bed from escaping gas. The victims were Raymond LaFerrriere, 12 years old; Jerome LaFerrriere, 10, and Fabine LaFerrriere, 9.

LaFerrriere said the gas was pouring from an open pipe protruding from a floor which the family thought had been disconnected.

LOW TARIFF RATESSays 20 Per Cent Impost on Glue-Sole Shoes Let Bata Undersell Domestic Firms Last Year.

A resolution opposing Secretary of State Hull's negotiations for reciprocal trade treaties which would lower the tariff on shoes, particularly those made in Czechoslovakia, was adopted unanimously today by delegates attending CIO United Shoe Workers of America convention at Hotel DeSoto.

In a committee report accompanying the resolution, it was stated that imports of shoes made by the Bata concern in Czechoslovakia had increased to 1,000,000 pairs last year, a rise of more than 500 per cent over the figure of the previous year.

The report stated also that shoes made in Bata's mass-production, non-union factories were being delivered in the United States at $1.17 a pair, in comparison to $1.65, the lowest possible cost of manufacturing similar shoes in America. An opinion imports this year might increase to 3,000,000 pairs and ultimately result in a lowering of wages and living conditions for America's shoe workers, as proposed by the committee.

Profits Under Tariff Rate.

Urging adoption of the resolution, Lewis C. Hubert, head of the International Research Bureau, said it was difficult for American manufacturers to compete with Bata under the present 20 per cent tariff on glued-sole shoes. He said the tariff was established before the company method of attaching soles had come into general use, and that Bata had profited by the method, which permits the firm to produce about 300,000 pairs of women's shoes a day. Until last year Bata, competing only in the sewed-sole trade, was forced to pay 30 per cent duty in the United States.

Hubert asserted that Bata's wages were low and that many of the firm's 60,000 employees lived in dormitories under military discipline. About 71 per cent of the workers are less than 21 years old, he said. The concern has the further advantage of being able to buy most of its raw materials in free markets, he added.

Sears Anti-Lynching Law.

The convention, which entered its third session today, voted to adopt a militant stand in favor of Federal anti-lynching legislation.

While no mention was made of recent attacks on union organizers in Texas, Arkansas and Tennessee, intent of the resolution was plain. In part, it stated:

"The labor movement has an important stake in the maintenance of law and order and in the use of firm measures by Government to prevent self-appointed groups from taking the law into their own hands."

In many instances over a period of years, in localities scattered throughout the United States, such self-appointed groups have assumed the power of government, and even now continue to do so, displacing established officers, frequently with the tacit approval of the latter."

In adopting a series of lesser resolutions, including those opposed to the establishment of industries in rural, "cheap labor" communities and the purchase by the Federal Government of shoes made in non-union plants, the convention cleared the way for its most important task, that of drafting and adopting a constitution.

Urge Decentralization Curb.

Dr. Shapley Takes Audience on Trip 100,000,000 Light Years in Space

Using Lantern Slides, Harvard Observatory Director Tells of Discovery of Galaxies, 300,000 Found in Census of Skies.

Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of Harvard Observatory and a native Missourian whose studies of variable stars have enabled calculations of stellar distances and resulted in new conceptions of the size of the universe, took an audience which filled the darkened Soldan High School auditorium last night on a vicarious journey through lantern slides, 100,000,000 light years out in space into the outer metagalaxy and back to earth again.

He told of the discovery of more than 300,000 galaxies in distant space during the "census of the skies" begun more than 10 years ago at the Harvard Observatory station near Bloemfontein, South Africa, and of the probability that the number would be doubled before completion of the survey five or 10 years hence. Beyond, perhaps lie millions of galaxies too far for recording on even the most sensitive telescopic plate.

Before the census was begun only about 30,000 galaxies were known. A galaxy is a "milky way" containing a billion or so stars. "We'll be conservative for Harvard and make it a billion," said Dr. Shapley. Our world is a small part of a small solar system, which in turn is a small part of a local star cloud in our home galaxy, our own "milky way," he explained. And our home galaxy is part of a super-galaxy.

Census to Answer Questions. The completed census will lay the foundation for future research, "perhaps enabling our grandchildren to answer some of the questions in our minds today," Dr. Shapley said. In addition, he said, it would enable reasonably accurate estimates of stellar distances and enlighten us as to the density and distribution of matter in space, so that we may be able to learn more about our position in the scheme of things.

Beginning with lantern slides showing members of our solar system, Dr. Shapley passed quickly to photographs of galaxies, remarking that after all the earth and moon were "deadish bodies" not particularly important—"except," he added with a chuckle, "that the earth is a good place for astronomers to set up their instruments."

As he showed photographs of our own "milky way," or home galaxy, Dr. Shapley likened it to a ham sandwich—"ham on a bun"—with mankind inside looking toward the him. This great aggregation of stars appeared to us as a trail of cloudy light, he explained, because we have a depth to look through. Observation through the flattened sides of the "bun," he went on, would not give the milky appearance because of the lesser density of matter.

"A Neighbor to Our System." Moving on from the home galaxy, "not much more than 100,000 light years across at its greatest width," Dr. Shapley took his audience by photographs to the large cloud of Magellan, then the small Magellanic clouds, "a near neighbor at the edge of our system, only about 100,000 light years away. A light year is the distance light travels in one year at its speed of about 186,000 miles a second.

Then he went on to external galaxies. Generally these are not as populous as a home galaxy, he said, since they contain usually about one billion stars as against one hundred thousand million in the local galaxy.

He went into space, showing photographs of galaxies more than 100,000,000 light years away. They appeared as tiny blurs of light, lens-shaped or wheel-shaped. Studies by Harvard Observatory, he said, seemed to indicate substantiation of the modern theory of an expanding universe, that is that galaxies are receding from one another.

Exhibiting a lantern slide densely dotted with points of light, each one representing a galaxy, Dr. Shapley said it was part of one of the most remarkable astronomical photographs ever made. The original plate, he declared, showed about 4500 new galaxies, all more than 100,000,000 light years distant.

Census in Seven Zones. In summary, he said that the census was being made in seven zones—meteors, the solar neighborhood, extending several hundred light years; the local star cloud, several thousand light years; the home galaxy, possibly 100,000 light years; the local super-galaxy (Milky Way, Magellanic clouds and other groups), perhaps 1,000,000 light years; the inner metagalaxy, out as far as 10,000,000 light years; the other metagalaxy, at the bounds of distance measurable with existing

INDICTED AFTER STEEL STRIKE

Three Accused of Obstructing Mail
During Republic Walkout.
By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 11.—A Federal grand jury indicted three men yesterday on charges of obstructing delivery of United States mail to the Republic Steel Corporation plant in Pittsburgh during the strike in "Little Steel" last summer.

The indictment charged they prevented a postal employee from entering the plant. The strike against Republic and other producers was called by the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

Conviction of Bank Robbery.
By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 11.—Orville C. Garrison was convicted by a Federal Court jury yesterday of participation in the $3900 robbery of the University bank here June 30.
Judge Albert L. Reeves announced he would pass sentence Saturday on Garrison, and four others who pleaded guilty. They are James Harris, Charles N. Ar-

PICKETED FILLING STATIONS DAMAGED

Lessees of One Attribute Attack to Their Refusal to Join Union.

Pumps at two non-union service stations, which are being picketed by an A. F. of L. union, were damaged Tuesday night, the operators informed police yesterday.

The giant containers on two pumps at a station at Cabanne avenue and Kingshighway were smashed. Herman Nichols, who operates the business with John W.
Tipton under a lease from the National Refining Co., said the cost of replacing the containers was $30.
Metal rods were driven into the clock mechanism of three pumps at a station at 3740 Eaton avenue.
The operator, Leslie Conway, estimated the damage at about $100.

Nichols told reporters he attributed the attack to his persistent refusal to rejoin the Gasoline Service Station and Warehouse Employees' Union of which he and Tipton formerly were members.

"We belonged to the union during the first service station strike several years ago," Nichols stated.
"Later we were dropped for non-payment of dues, but since we leased this station, where I had been an employee for 10 years, the union officers have made renewed effort to get us back in the fold.
We have refused on the ground that we are now employers, and should not be in the union. We agreed to employ union men if we hired any help, but that failed to satisfy the union, and a picket has been in front of our door for more than two months."

Discussing the leasing arrangement, which the nine major oil companies have with station operators and about which the union has complained, Nichols said he and Tipton had doubled their income under the arrangement.

"I made a canvass of the situation in an effort to form an organization of station operators and found that about 85 per cent of the lease operators are well satisfied," Nichols asserted. "The other 15 per cent are not doing so well, and are not union men. I also found that about 50 per cent of the operators paying dues to the union do so for fear of being picketed."

Conway declined to make a charge against the union in the absence of proof. He said, however, that it appeared significant that two non-union stations, which were being picketed, were the objects of attack.

JOHN M. ROBERTSON BURIAL
TO BE HELD ON SATURDAY

Services at 2:30 P. M. at 4460 Maryland for Head of Real Estate Companies.

Funeral services for John M.
Robertson, president of several real estate companies and former head of the Robertson Aircraft Corporation, will be held at 2:30 p. m. Saturday at the home of a sister, Mrs.
George F. Powell, 4440 Maryland avenue, with burial in Bellefontaine Cemetery. Mr. Robertson, 53 years old, died yesterday at St. John's Hospital of a heart ailment, after an illness of 10 days.

Born in Nashville, Tenn., he entered the real estate business in St. Louis as secretary to the late Lawrence Pierce, who constructed the Pierce Building at 112 North Fourth street. Following Mr.
Pierce's death, he became president of the company operating this building, and also of companies which operate the Cotton Belt and Boatmen's Bank buildings. He was one of the founders and at one time president of the City Improvement Association, an organization of downtown property owners.

Mr. Robertson was unmarried and lived at the Senate Apartments, 265 Union boulevard. He is survived by six sisters and three brothers:
Mrs. Powell, Mrs. W. Earl Lane,
Mrs. Joseph A. Kelley, Mrs. J.
Frank Martin, Mrs. Edwin J. Uhl and Mrs. George W. Bonnell, and William B. Frank H. and Daniel R.
Robertson.

100 AUTOMOBILE FATALITIES
IN ST. LOUIS IN 9 MONTHS

Safety Council Reports One More Traffic Death Than in Corresponding 1936 Period.

Reports on automobile fatalities in nine months of 1937, issued today by the St. Louis Safety Council, show that St. Louis has lost the position it held earlier in the year as one of the few cities of over 500,000 population to have a better record this year than in 1936.

The total number of deaths in St. Louis to the end of September was 100, one more than at the corresponding time last year. Only Boston and Pittsburgh now have had fewer fatalities this year than last.

In rate of fatalities per 100,000 population, St. Louis now is seventh highest in the Safety Council's list of 13 cities, with a rate of 16.1.
Milwaukee has the lowest rate, 10.9,
and Los Angeles the highest, 38.7.
The average rate for the 13 cities is 17.1. September fatalities throughout the nation were 10 per cent fewer than in August, but the nine months' total still is 9 per cent above the 1936 figure.

United Charities Art Exhibit.
An art exhibit, consisting of more than 50 oil paintings, for the benefit of United Charities, will be opened tomorrow at the Doubleday Doran Book Store, 310 North Eighth street. Receipts from the sale of the paintings, which are the work of Blanche Skarinka, will go to the United Charities fund. Members of the Junior League will act as saleswomen.

GENERAL
MOVIE
SHELL OFFICER DEFENDS FIRINGS
AT WOOD RIVER

Testifies at NLRB Hearings 3 Were Discharged for Discipline and Not for Union Activity.

DISMISSALS RESULT OF STAY-IN STRIKE

Oil Company Vice-President Says Men Dropped "Stood Out in Inciting Illegal Acts."

The three employees of the Wood River refinery of the Shell Petroleum Corporation who lost their jobs last May were not fired for union activity but were "singled out for punishment to maintain a reasonable amount of discipline," A. E. Lacombe, vice-president in charge of the company's manufacturing operations, testified yesterday at a National Labor Relations Board hearing of charges against the corporation.

He was the first witness to be called in the company's defense against the labor board's contention that it violated the Wagner Act by firing the men for their activities in the International Union of Operating Engineers, by discriminating against union members in seniority rating, by interfering in the internal affairs of the union and by denying the employees' right to be represented by representatives of their own choosing.

E. J. Verlie of Alton, one of three attorneys for the company, said he would summon about seven more witnesses when the hearing is resumed tomorrow morning. It is expected that the proceedings, held in the Federal building before Trial Examiner William F. Webb, will be concluded Saturday.

Result of Sit-Down Strike.
The discharged employees, William O'Dell, F. C. Werner and W. C. Eades, committed "illegal acts in taking possession of and holding company property" in a sit-down strike at the refinery May 3, Lacombe testified. It had been shown that 96 members of the union employed in the compounding department began a stay-in strike that day, and 21 were still there when the plant was evacuated three days later.

"When the strike was being ended we were faced with a rather difficult decision," the witness said. "All of these 21 had shown a certain amount of perseverance in holding the company's property, but I could not help feeling that it would be an act of considerable harshness to discharge 21 employees."

"The acts certainly did call for some punishment. I tried to determine whether any had distinguished themselves sufficiently to warrant singling them out rather than discharge all. I obtained a strong conviction that three stood out in inciting these illegal acts and in making the men persevere in the strike."

Counsel for the labor board, Alan F. Perl, had attempted to show in five days of testimony that the three men who were discharged were the elected agents of the strikers and acted only in behalf of the union in conducting the strike. They formed the grievance committee of the union in the department where the strike was called.

Theory of Union's Purpose.

Under Verlie's questioning, Lacombe denied that O'Dell, Eades and Werner were fired for union activity.

"I think that the purposes of a union are to promote the economic and social welfare of its members, and union activity is to assist in carrying out those activities," he said. "Contracts and grievances are functions of union activity; illegal acts are not."

The company contends the strike was in violation of an agreement between the management and the operating engineers and 12 craft unions in the plant. The board had taken the position that the company violated the agreement by posting a work schedule in the compounding department when the employees thought the schedule was to be a subject of negotiation.

Cross-examined by Perl, Lacombe said there was nothing in the agreement which would prevent new schedules from being put into effect at any time. He said he had agreed in a conference with representatives of all the unions in the plant that the "technique of scheduling" should be discussed in a conference on special rules governing the operating engineers.

The last witnesses called by Perl were members of the union, who testified that L. A. Lobman, assistant manager of the refinery, had questioned them last June about a forthcoming election of union officers, expressing the opinion that the incumbents should be ousted.

Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. Seeks That Sum From Insurance Companies.

The Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co., 1824 Washington avenue, has filed a claim against insurance companies for $243,000 for losses in the strike of its employees, which lasted more than two months during the first part of this year. Employees are members of the United Electrical & Radio Workers of the CIO.

Announcement of the claim was

BILLIKENS DEPART TONIGHT TO MEET CREIGHTON, SATURDAY

27 PLAYERS TO MAKE UP SQUAD FOR GAME WITH THE BLUEJAYS

St. Louis U. Will Be Making Valley Football Debut—Harris to Start at Fullback With Diffley at Best's Tackle.

The Billikens' game with Creighton at Omaha Saturday is a setup for an upset, and nobody realizes this more than Coach Cecil Muellerleile who will depart with his squad of 27 tonight.

The St. Louis U. coach is a little uneasy. The players say they think it will be one of their toughest games of the season. What they really feel may or may not be another matter.

"Mull" Is Worried.

"That's what has me worried," Muellerleile said. "It is our first Missouri Valley Conference game. Despite Creighton's won and lost record I know they have a good team, that is capable of beating us if we let down. We just can't let down. That's all there is to it."

The coach named his probable starting lineup today. In the backfield will be Harris at fullback, Denny Cochran and Carl Totsch at the halves and Bill Cochran at quarterback. Gorman will play center, Vollmer and Yates at the guards, Diffley and Cagle at tackle and Gayer and Hagan at the ends.

"Some of these fellows have been playing a lot of football for us," Muellerleile said. "Some of them are almost iron men. Why Cagle is what you might call a super-iron man. Did you know he has played almost every minute of our games this season?"

There was one major change in the lineup. Bernard Diffley is at a tackle position instead of Beno Best, who sustained a fractured finger in the Missouri game last week. Harris is starting at fullback in place of Herrmann, still troubled with a knee injury.

This afternoon the Billikens will polish up their offense in a light drill. Yesterday, they spent an hour working against Creighton plays, then turned attention to their own offense and finished by hitting the tackling dummy.

Muellerleile said he expected St. Louis to be outweighed slightly, but not enough to make any difference.

Not a Push-over.

While the Billikens have been feeling happy this week over their 17-10 victory over Missouri, Creighton has been recovering from a 10-0 defeat by Xavier of Cincinnati. But the Bluejays' defeat by Kansas was followed by a 15-7 win over Drake only 9-0, so they probably won't be pushovers for St. Louis U.

Besides the starting lineup, other players making the trip from St. Louis U. include McGonnigle, Walker, Nunn, Shea, Drabille, Best, Clark, Oates, Brooks, Putnam, Hartle, Roemer, Foehr, Hartman and Johnson or Sullivan.

Night Work Helps Creighton.

Prepare for Billiken Game. Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 11.—It was another after-dinner practice for the Creighton Bluejays last night as they drilled hard for the Saturday game with the St. Louis University Billikens.

The Bluejays, who lost to Xavier, 19 to 0, last Saturday, crowded into a room in Creighton's gymnasium to see moving pictures of their game with Xavier. Head Coach Marcy Schwartz spent nearly two hours rerunning the pictures and pointing out how the various players missed assignments.

Following on the practice field with all electric lights turned on. Until 7 o'clock the Creighton coaching staff drilled the gridiron.

According to Dr. "Bill" Dendinger, team physician, the squad, with the exception of Tackle Sylvester Lulinski, is in good condition.

Coach Schwartz worked on three sets of backs, stressing particular attention with the backfield composed of Gantman, quarter; Barnes, full, and Pletz and Zielez, halfbacks. The other behind-the-line combinations had Locke at quarter and Hopp, Novak and Roach on the No. 2 and 3. Clark at quarter and Robin, Hart, and Paul Hartline on the No. 3 backfield.

Shortly before the signal to knock off the evening's work, Head Coach Schwartz sent two teams running up and down the field in signal workouts. The first team and the one likely to go against the St. Louis club had Oma Kelly at center; Werw and Vana, guards; Kober and Gromnicki, at ends.

CENTRAL CATHOLIC AND BELLEVILLE HIGH 'B' ELEVENS TIE, 6-6

Belleville's fourth quarter drive enabled it to score a touchdown that tied Central Catholic, 6-6, in a game between the "B" teams of both schools yesterday afternoon at Jones Park in East St. Louis.

Warner Wild climaxed a drive from midfield by going over from the one-yard line in the final session. A pass from Bob Kenney to Victor Belz, in the end zone, accounted for Central Catholic's score midway in the second period.

SCHMELING IN U.S.; BOUT WITH HARRY THOMAS TO BE 15 ROUNDS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Max Schmeling-Harry Thomas bout here on Dec. 13 will be for 15 rounds, instead of 10, Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today upon the arrival of the German with a request that the warmup engagement be stretched to the championship date.

Pronouncing himself in customarily fine condition, but without a fight since he knocked out Joe Louis, 13 months ago, Schmeling explained he wants to crowd in all fighting possible before he gets a crack at Louis for the title next month.

"Thomas is tough as they say but it may take me eight or nine rounds to soften him up," Schmeling said, "and I'll need those extra rounds to finish him. Also, I need the weight of the world on my shoulders."

COACH'S FATHER WILL SEE SON'S TEAM FIRST TIME IN 18 YEARS

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 11.—For 18 years A. J. Robertson has been coach at Bradley College. He has turned out football, basketball and baseball champions. But his father, James F. Robertson of St. Paul, Minn., has never seen a Robertson machine in action. The elder Robertson expects to break this run next Saturday, when Bradley meets Knox College for the leadership in Illinois Conference on the local gridiron.

MAHLEY RETURNS TO PRACTICE WITH TIGERS

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 11.—Heine Mahley, ace Missouri backfield man, threw away his crutches and surprised teammates in practice yesterday, although a knee injury received in the Iowa State game two weeks ago limited his workout.

The rest of the varsity spent a full practice session on offense and defense against the "B" team, and found difficulty in making their pass defense function.

Summer Wins, 12-6.

Summer High's football team defeated Roosevelt (Negro) High of Gary, Ind., in an Armistice day football game this afternoon at Public Schools Stadium, 12 to 6.

Paulk scored for the visitors in the second quarter on a 20-yard run, but Summer came back to score twice in the final half. Harris plunged from the two-yard line for a touchdown in the third quarter and Hughes intercepted a Gary pass and ran 20 yards for the winning score in the fourth period.

About 5000 saw the game.

U. CITY LEADS MAPLEWOOD AT THE HALF, 6-0

1Q 2Q 3Q 4Q T
U. City — 0 6
Maplewood — 0 0

By Reno Hahn.

MAPLEWOOD HIGH SCHOOL FIELD, Nov. 11.—A favored Maplewood High eleven found itself on the short end of a 6-0 score at the half of its Armistice day football game against University City here this afternoon before a crowd of 2000. It was the first football meeting of the schools since 1934.

The Indians scored shortly before the end of the half. Maplewood had the ball on its 20-yard line and advanced to the 38 before a weak punt by Joe Hennasy carried only seven yards past the line of scrimmage.

University City was driven back to the 50, but then a triple reserve play from Bill Jack to Bernard Robinson to Ralph Blumberg, a substitute back, resulted in a 50-yard gain for a touchdown. Blumberg raced down the sideline, within a yard of the end, and at least six Maplewood players either tackled or missed him on the way.

Ted Leibig's place-kick for the extra point failed.

The open season on wild turkeys doesn't start until Dec. 1. But Nov. 25 will be Thanksgiving day and that is what makes the tame turkeys wild.

The daily bag limit on quail is 10 and possession 15. Market hunters will protect themselves in the clinch.

The Passing Show.

I NOTICE where our Flyers in a game replete with the services of Billy Gonsalves, star forward, in his opening game of the season, Coach Alec McNab of the Shamrocks announced today his probable starting lineup.

I feel confident that Bill Watson will be with us at center half-back," said McNab, "but Gonsalves tells me he definitely will not play Sunday against the Cleveland Indians. That leaves us with three forwards of last season available and I will announce tomorrow signing of several other players.

Joe Rodriguez will be in Tom Erbe and Bill Lehman at back; Eddie Begley, Bill Williams and Ray Egan at halfback; Mac Scotty Nilsen and Joe Stratton on the forward line along with players not yet signed.

McNab said that if Franks Lyons and Julio Gonzalez, former members of the Burke club of the St. Louis Soccer League, are free agents as he has been informed, he will make them contracts. Lyons, a fullback, will be paired with Erbe, Lehman available for half-duty and sending Egan up to forward line.

Jimmy Roe, one of the bright stars in the team last season, not be available for at least several months. He suffered a broken leg in his left knee last spring and has the leg in a plaster cast. Gonsalves has refused to sign a contract offered him by the Shamrocks and he said to feel obliged to the Patrick club of the St. Louis Soccer League. The registration form he signed for that team was later declared void by the United States Football Association.

Alabama and Pitt, two old Rose Bowl favorites, are running nipp and tuck for the California assignment this year, with the Panthers holding a slight edge. But there comes a Crimson Tide in the affairs of Alabama that, if taken at face value, is the next, the odds are about as reliable as the weather.

Perhaps the standout possibilities for an explosion that could shake every gridiron from the rock-bound coast to the sun-kissed shores are offered at Pittsburgh where Pitt's power-packed Panthers, currently ranked No. 1 on the national list, entertain the unpredictable Cornhuskers from Nebraska.

Pitt has been going like a ball of fire since the Fordham fiasco. The Huskers, on the other hand, after starting off with a terrific bang, have graduated downward to where their future is of the popping-cork variety. But there's always the chance that they might repeat what they did against Minnesota in their opener.

Incidentally the Pasadena end of the sketch is still in the air. Just who will be the hosts and who the guests is a matter of speculation.

"Lack of Reserves Beats Notre Dame." Napoleon made the same complaint.

Efforts are being made by the Spanish Society of this city to bring the Basque team to St. Louis upon the conclusion of its Mexican tour. New York has also sent a team for games and has been tentatively promised four or five. The Basque team is regarded as one of the most colorful combinations ever to visit the United States.

A wide open offensive will be thrown against the New York Yankees pro football eleven by the St. Louis Gunners when the two teams meet at Walsh Stadium Sunday.

The Yanks shut out the Boston Shamrocks two weeks ago and last Sunday held the strong Cincinnati aggregation scoreless until late in the final quarter.

Seven Northwestern football players are seeking to fill one vacancy on the Evanston (Ill.) police force. Must be pointing for the Northwestern Mounted, who always get their man.

Strong Lineup. Certainly, Coach Conselman intends starting a strong lineup and, if he sees fit to make frequent substitutions during the battle with the Missouri game in view, that's what a head coach is for, isn't it?

Jackie Warner and Jones Klein, injured backs, both are ready for service, Saturday. Maybe, Warner won't play but Klein is scheduled for his long tour, passed by on the way to his afternoon. The rest of the Bears are in fine condition and, along with tests against Missouri plays have not overlooked defensive tactics for use against them.

According to reports from Tulsa, second and third string teams using Washington's defense had no trouble yesterday breaking up the Hurricane Varsity's passing plays. The field was wet and this may have had some influence on the result but many of Thompson's passes were knocked down.

Coach Hurt is not looking for the Bears to accept defeat and is striving to koy any possible over-confidence on the part of his players.

Arrive Saturday. The Tulsans will hold a final workout tomorrow afternoon. They are due to arrive here, Saturday morning, several hours before time for the game.

U. S. Polo Loses. By the Associated Press.

DOE SPEARS' TEAM TO MEET WEST VIRGINIA

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 11.—The man who guided West Virginia's football team to national prominence in the early twenties comes back Saturday to match wits with the Mountaineers' youngest head coach.

Clarence (Doc) Spears, the club physician whose Mountaineers teams boasted victories over the nation's best in the years from 1921 to 1924, returns as coach of the Toledo University Rockets.

Across the field from him Saturday will be the 20-year-old Marshall "Little Sleepy" Glenn, the part-time Chicago medical college student to whom the university entrusted its football fortunes this year.

Coches Babe Lyons and Dick

Fraher are working the Gunners in unusually long practice sessions this week in an effort to build a finer offense. While the running attack clicked in pretty good shape against the well-drilled Ashland team last Sunday, the coaches hope to spring some first-class lateral passes on the Yanks Sunday.

Jack Kavanagh, flashy Kilkenny Teachers' College back, who broke into the Gunners lineup and Sunday for the first time, is expected to show added improvement Sunday now that he is familiar with the Gunners' system of play.

The fact that the Yankees possess two extraordinarily fine field goal artists in Tackle Ossie Osofsky and Ole Neismith, both former Big Six Conference stars, means the Gunners will be playing a slashing type of defensive game whenever the Yankees get into their territory. Both stars kicked two field goals against Cincinnati.

Walter Bartanen, the Gunners' youthful tackle, is counted on to uphold the Gunners defensive play. His work has been one of the features of the performance of the local team this season.

The strong Yankee backfield is composed of Andy Karpis, great fullback at Detroit U. a few years ago; Bo Hewes, outstanding Big Six Conference back at Oklahoma in 1936; Bill Abbe, former New York U. star, and Ole Neismith, quarterback, who played his football at the University of Kansas.

The Yanks are coached by Jim

Mooney, old Georgetown star, who has been identified with professional football for several years.

New Dartmouth Boxing Coach.

Bob Bigley, New York U. graduate, has been signed to coach boxing and soccer at Dartmouth.

JOINT PLAN GIVES ALLEGHANY CONTROL

Stedman Committee Would Have Nominal Financial Dominance Under Reorganization Proposal.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—For fear that the Interstate Commerce Commission may endorse the only authoritative plan remaining before it for the reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railroad—one providing for joint control of the system by the Stedman Committee of bankers and insurance companies and by the Alleghany Corporation, Van Sweringen holding trust—the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee will continue tomorrow in its endeavor to prove that neither group is deserving of public confidence.

After 15 months of conflict, testimony now shows, the Stedman group has abandoned its own program, capitulated to that framed by William Wyer of the Alleghany interests, and will present a united front with the latter when arguments are heard before the Interstate Commerce Commission next month. The joint plan, in its broad outlines, calls for operating control by the Alleghany and nominal financial dominance by the Stedman Committee.

The Alleghany is in the powerful strategic position of owning 46 per cent, or a controlling interest, of Missouri Pacific stock. The Stedman Committee represents $96,000, 000 of the system's funded debt. A third organization which has come to light is the Delfield Committee, headed by Edward C. Delfield of Delfield & Co., a New York private bank, which represents $49, 000,000 of the railroad's junior mortgage bonds. Wyer testified yesterday that the Alleghany interests, in consideration of the Delfield Committee's adhesion to their plan, had agreed to give to this committee two members on the proposed new board of directors out of 12 allotted under the plan to Alleghany out of a total of 18.

Evidence Against Alleghany.
The Senate Committee has been busy for some weeks with gathering evidence discrediting the Alle-ghany Corporation. There is testimony on record purporting to show that, under Van Sweringen control of the Missouri Pacific, only the statute of limitations prevented prosecution under the criminal clause of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation Act; and that there was juggling of cash assets among Missouri Pacific subsidiaries, together with false bookkeeping entries, involving millions of dollars.

Then, for two days, witnesses in behalf of the Stedman Committee were on the stand. They were Frederick W. Ecker, vice-president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.; Alfred H. Meyers, treasurer of the New York Life Insurance Co., both being members of the Stedman Committee; Eugene J. Conroy, associate counsel of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., and secretary of the Stedman Committee, and W.
Lloyd Kitchell, a partner of Cawdralader, Wickerham & Taft, counsel to the committee.

Their testimony was intended to justify the committee's new-born alliance with the Alleghany interests on the ground that in the proposed reorganization such safeguards are introduced as to make impossible a repetition of past abuses. Particular emphasis was laid by the witnesses on the impeccable character of the bankers and insurance officials composing the Stedman Committee. This would insure, they insisted, the selection of such directors and officials in the reorganized railroad as would protect the interests not only of the system, but of the public.

Chart of Allocated Stock Deals.
Under that position of financial attitude, Max Lowenthal, special counsel to the Senate committee, exploded a bombshell late yesterday afternoon by introducing an exhibit purporting to show that the officers were concerned, they maintained, the favors of J. P. Morgan & Co., to purchase Alleghany Corporation stocks at a price of $20 a share, when the price on the market was $35.

Truman Assails Both Groups.
"You know and I know," exclaimed Meyers, "that such things are going on in business all over the country all the time."

The insurance companies involved were the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., the New York Life Insurance Co., the Prudential Insurance Co. and the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. The bankers were Kuhn, Loeb & Co.
and the Bank of New York & Trust Co.

MRS. BASIL (MARTHA BARKLEY) RYAN.

BASIL RYAN'S BRIDE DENIES HE WAS DRUNK

Her Family Gets Warrant Naming Another Man as Father of Her Child.

By the Associated Press.
HICKORY, N. C., Nov. 11.—Basil
A. (Pat) Ryan, 28-year-old grandson of the late Thomas Fortune
Ryan, who married Miss Martha Barkley, 21, of Morganton, N. C., last Thursday, remained a patient at a hospital here last night. At the same time it became known that a warrant had been issued charging another man with paternity of Mrs. Ryan's two-months-old baby.

Ryan was admitted to the hospital Friday morning, a few hours after he was married. Visitors were not allowed to see him. Hospital attendants said Mrs. Ryan had come to the hospital at least twice since Ryan was admitted.

Ryan was reported in a serious condition. Physicians declined to elaborate on the patient's condition other than to say it was serious.

Statement by Mrs. Ryan.

In a formal statement last night,
Mrs. Ryan said:

"I don't understand the publicity and the anxiety the press seems to have about my marriage to Mr.
Basil Ryan. We met in my sister's home in Hickory on Tuesday, Nov.
2, and were married on Thursday,
Nov. 4, in Morganton, N. C. On Friday morning Mr. Spurlock, football coach at Lenoir-Rhyne College, came to our room in Hotel
Lindell and took Mr. Ryan away.
Mr. Ryan told me that he would be back for me by 11 o'clock. Mr.
Ryan did not return and I later found out that he had been taken by Mr. Spurlock to a Hickory hospital. I have visited him daily since then in the hospital."

"I am advised that the press has carried reports to the effect that I was drunk at the time of the marriage. This I want to emphatically deny. He was not under the influence of whisky or any other intoxicant, and this fact can be verified by Mr. Lawrence Crouch, register of deeds of Burke County, N. C., and Mr. Earl Franklin, justice of the peace, who performed the ceremony and by Mr.
Franklin's wife and mother who witnessed the ceremony."

Justice of the Peace Earl Franklin said he married the pair between 8 and 9 o'clock Thursday night. A friend said Ryan had known Miss Barkley only a short time.

Ryan is one of the 10 children of John Barry Ryan, New York sportman, author and publisher, and Mrs. Ryan. His grandfather died in 1928, leaving a $140,000,000 estate.

Paternity Warrant Issued.

Sheriff, said last night at Morganton that a warrant had been issued charging a Morganton man with the paternity of Mrs. Ryan's baby.

Details of Alleghany Plan.

Further examination yesterday afternoon into the Alleghany reorganization plan brought out the following points:

The new board of directors would be chosen by the present Alle-ghany-controlled board of the Missouri Pacific.

Five members of the board, including the chairman, are defendants in a suit for accounting, filed by Trustee Guy A.
Thompson, which charges the Missouri Pacific was defrauded of millions by the operations of the late O. P. Van Sweringen. The Alle-ghany interests have been pressing for election to the new board three of these five—George A. Tomlinson, chairman of the board, and Darwin
S. Barrett Jr., and Alva Bradley, directors.

The financial headquarters of the Missouri would cease to be a Missouri corporation. There are provisions for its incorporation in some other state, presumably one more hospitable to holding company control.

It is designed to consolidate into one corporation the Missouri Pacific and its subsidiaries, the New Orleans, Texas & Mexico Railway
Co. and the International-Great Northern Railroad Co., together with the affiliates of each.

In all probability, the Missouri Pacific would cease to be a Missouri corporation. There are provisions for its incorporation in
some other state, presumably one
more hospitable to holding company control.

The new board of directors,
the Alleghany would have the right to nominate, subject to the Stedman committee's approval, 10 members out of 18. Two others go to the Alleghany's ally, the Delfield committee, which would nominate four members. Thus the Alle-ghany and the Delfield interests together would have a two-thirds majority on the board.

was the father of her baby abandoned last Friday at Missouri Baptist Hospital. The man, a painter, denied the charge.

Three nurses from the hospital identified the girl as one who had given birth to a daughter at the hospital Oct. 23 and after viewing the man said he had made arran-

the girl's only visitor.

The pair fled from the hospital saying they would return to get the girl's name that had been given to them.

The girl had been in an orphanage until about a year ago.

An old marriage license, altered to bear the names given at the hospital, was found in the room.

SALOON MEN ADVISED TO OBEY LAW STRICTLY

Excise Commissioner McDaniels and Others Admonish 250 at Mass Meeting.

St. Louis saloonkeepers, attending a mass meeting at the North St. Louis Turners Hall yesterday, were admonished by State and city liquor control officials that, if they wished to be respected as reputable business men, they must comply strictly with the laws regulating liquor traffic.

The meeting, sponsored by the Missouri Beverage Dealers' Defense League and the State Retail Liquor Dealers' Association, and attended by about 250 tavernkeepers, was addressed also by speakers representing the liquor business, who urged that operators prevent the trade from degenerating into a racket.

Charles W. Hamilton of Chicago, president of the Illinois Beverage Dealers' Defense League, declared the public must be made to remember that tavernkeepers are no longer bootleggers but self-respecting business men. In order to ac-

A CORN goes deep. When you cut or pare it, you merely trim the surface. The root remains imbedded in the toe. Soon the corn comes back—worse than ever. Feet become ugly, disfigured. But when you Blue-Jay a corn, it's gone for good, because Blue-Jay removes root and all!

RELIEVES PAIN INSTANTLY, SAFELY

Blue-Jay corn plasters have a remarkable double action. The moment you apply one to an aching corn, the pain stops instantly, by removing pressure. Then quickly the corn loosens, lifts out, is gone. (Exceptionally stubborn cases may require a second application.)

When we say gone, we mean the entire corn—root and all! There's no coming back! Blue-Jay root-and-all method ends the worst corn forever. There's no danger of infection.

HEARING ON NAMING OF NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Central and Southwest Chiefly Urged at Board Committee Session.

Traditions of an 84-year-old institution and the desire to perpetuate them clashed with the local pride of a young neighborhood at a public hearing before the Board of Education Instruction Committee last night on the naming of the new $800,000 high school at Kingshighway and Arsenal street.

Alumni of Central High School, some of whom attended it in the early days at Fifteenth and Olive streets, urged the board to call the new school Central. More than half of the audience of about 100 men and women in the board assembly room stood to show they favored Central. Other speakers urged the continuation of the name Southwest, the temporary designation under which the school was opened in September.

The estate of the late Jacob Stoeke, brick manufacturer and fruit and produce merchant, born here in 1845, offered the board $40,000 under his will for the acquisition and equipment of an athletic field adjoining the school. If the school were named for Stoeke, the offer would be accepted.

Other speakers advocated the names of Samuel Gompers, labor leader; James E. Yeatman, civic leader, or William Butler, once principal of the old Yeatman High.

Denton J. Snider, philosopher, writer and pedagogue, and Richard Bartholdi, Congressman.

No Decision at Present.

Chairman John J. Sheahan said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that no name could be recommended by the Instruction Committee until the PWA released the building on completion of final construction details. This release is expected soon. Seven of the 12 board members attended the hearing. It was apparent that the contest was between the two titles, Central and Southwest. Since the 1927 tornado, Central has been housed in the old Yeatman building, but there is a movement to restore Yeatman as a complete high school.

"What we are seeking to preserve," he declared, "is a tradition. There is a feeling of loyalty to Central High such as is not engendered at all schools."

The tradition theme was emphasized by most of the speakers, who told of their love for the name and institution of Central as the first high school west of the Mississippi, the spirit of the old school lingering with them, the recollections of happy days when the establishment was at Grand boulevard and Windsor place, and the desire that Central should be perpetuated for the city and for their children's children.

Arguments they advanced included these: A school with such a record deserved proper housing; the name was not given originally in a strict geographical sense and the section of the city served had nothing to do with its use; there was no intention of dominating the parents' organization at the new school; many alumni, including Gerard Swope, head of the General Electric Co., favored the proposal; several Central endowments might be lost if the name should be dropped; some persons who have served on the Central faculty achieved national or international recognition; graduates have distinguished themselves in many fields, and hold many executive positions in business, where they can be helpful to future graduates of a school called Central.

Speakers for Central presented by Calhoun were: Gen. E. J. Spencer, class of '76, who advocated the name in behalf of the Missouri Historical Society and also favored restoring Yeatman; Frank A. Thompson, former Judge of the St. Louis Court of Appeals; H. A. Hamilton, '95, former Circuit Judge, who said Southwest could inherit the name, tradition, soul and trophies of Central; A. B. Frey, former Taylor, '91, vice-president of Boatmen's National Bank.

Advocates of the name Southwest argued that the new school served a large, comparatively new residential section in the southwestern part of the city, which was entitled to build up its own tradition. Southwest, they said, it would produce its own distinguished alumni in two generations, and the memories of the past should not be attached to them. Southwest, they insisted, was the name under which the place was built and is known now, and their children counted on attending a school of that name.

THE NEW MOVIES IN ST. LOUIS FOR THIS WEEK

MID-WEEK OPENINGS
GENERAL AT THEATERS

Fox, Ambassador, Loew's and St. Louis Programs Already on Screen.

INCE the Ambassador Theater joined the Fox in a Tuesday opening this week and Loew's and the St. Louis made changes to all new pictures are now on exhibition. The Missouri, which had an unusually good response to "The Awful Truth," holds to "Second Honeymoon," at the Ambassador, shows Tyrone Power and Loretta Young as an ex-husband and wife who get together again. Stuart Erwin, Claire Trevor, Marjorie Weaver, Lyle Talbot and Jayne Regan are in the cast. "Dinner at the Ritz," on the same program, has Annabella, the French actress, as a Parisian banker's daughter who tracks down his murderer and recovers the bonds stolen from him. Paul Lukas, David Niven and Romney Brent have important roles.

The St. Louis Theater's first-run feature, with a second showing of "Thin Ice" is "Hollywood Cowgirl," a hybrid Western, in which George O'Brien portrays a Hollywood actor who rides a Wyoming community of racketeers. At its children's show Saturday morning, the theater will add a second Western, Johnny Mack Brown in "Trail of Vengeance."

Washington U. Plays. The "English 16" plays, written by students at Washington University, will be presented in the auditorium of Brown Hall, on the campus, tomorrow and Saturday evenings and the $50 Wilson prize awarded to the author of one of them. The plays are "Bantai," "Merry-Go-Round of 1938" and "Fight for Your Lady." "Merry-Go-Round of 1938" brings together four noted comedians—Billy House, Bert Lahr, Mischa Auer and Jimmy Savo—as the guardians of a young singer, Joy Hodges.

The romantic lead opposite Miss Hodges is taken by John King. Alice Brady is his aunt, Louise Fonda and Barbara Read have other roles.

House will be remembered for its appearance at Municipal Opera two seasons ago in "No, No, Nanette." Lahr recently appeared in

SCREEN TEST A DAY
SUPPLIES FILM TALENT

Much Good Celluloid Wasted in the Hope of Finding a Star.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 11.—Minnie Glutz does have film opportunity even though her name will need alterations. Search for talent continues to such an extent that, as an average, someone is tested at each major studio daily.

At one studio alone—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—450 tests of newcomers are made annually. It is estimated that all Hollywood studios use a total of 2,000,000 feet of film for tests each year.

These tests are not merely the old-time ones wherein the subject turns her face from side to side and smiles in close-up, medium shot and long shot. They are well-planned and executed.

For every test made in Hollywood a previous one usually has been made in Europe, in New York or some other big city. These first tests establish screen possibilities and the Hollywood tests spell either contracts or lost hopes. Practically every tested person has been sought by Hollywood, rather than seeking Hollywood himself.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer does not stop with giving its newcomers one test. Before they get into a picture, they have at least three and often many more tests. Today, such series of tests are given being given Hedy Lamarr, Lionel Royce, Gilbert Russell and others whose debuts are yet to be made.

Before these tests are made, the studio sends these newcomers to the most skilled dramatic instructors, designers, make-up artists and hairdressers in the world and top cameramen, soundmen and directors make the tests. These tests are seen by all directors and executives. Such a test brought Alan Curtis his chance with Joan Crawford in "Mannequin."

The fact that most of the foreign importations speak surprisingly good English and soon are near perfect, is always a puzzle to Amer-

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 11.—Minnie Glutz does have film opportunity even though her name will need alterations. Search for talent continues to such an extent that, as an average, someone is tested at each major studio daily.

At one studio alone—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer—450 tests of newcomers are made annually. It is estimated that all Hollywood studios use a total of 2,000,000 feet of film for tests each year.

These tests are not merely the old-time ones wherein the subject turns her face from side to side and smiles in close-up, medium shot and long shot. They are well-planned and executed.

For every test made in Hollywood a previous one usually has been made in Europe, in New York or some other big city. These first tests establish screen possibilities and the Hollywood tests spell either contracts or lost hopes. Practically every tested person has been sought by Hollywood, rather than seeking Hollywood himself.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer does not stop with giving its newcomers one test. Before they get into a picture, they have at least three and often many more tests. Today, such series of tests are given being given Hedy Lamarr, Lionel Royce, Gilbert Russell and others whose debuts are yet to be made.

Before these tests are made, the studio sends these newcomers to the most skilled dramatic instructors, designers, make-up artists and hairdressers in the world and top cameramen, soundmen and directors make the tests. These tests are seen by all directors and executives. Such a test brought Alan Curtis his chance with Joan Crawford in "Mannequin."

Favor in Berlin—Step in Line With Premier's
Speech.(Copyright, 1937, New York Tribune, Inc.)
LONDON, Nov. 11.—The British Cabinet at its weekly meeting yesterday tentatively decided to send Viscount Halifax, Lord President of the Council, to Berlin to hold informal discussions with Chancellor Adolf Hitler and his lieutenants regarding Germany's demand for colonies and other problems which have prevented a rapprochement between the two nations.

The Cabinet's decision is in line with Tuesday night's speech by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, in which he said Britain sincerely desired friendship and understanding with the Berlin-Rome axis of Fascist states, and that improvement of relations could be attained by "informal discussion" rather than by "public declamation."

Lord Halifax, who is the Government's chief spokesman in the House of Lords, was selected for the mission because he is generally considered pro-German and is persona grata in Berlin, unlike Foreign Secretary Eden, who has incurred the disfavor of the Nazis.

Decision in Eden's Absence.

It is significant that the decision was taken during the absence of Eden, who is busy in Brussels at the Far Eastern conference.

Lord Halifax has replaced Eden several times in the past when the Foreign Secretary was ill or on leave. Eden has been working overtime for many months, and there would be little surprise if he took some time off in the near future. Persistent rumors that he might be moved out of the Foreign Secretariate have been denied.

When Halifax meets Hitler, along with Colonel-General Hermann Wilhelm Goering and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, they will discuss such matters as Germany's claims to her lost colonies; the intervention of Germany and Italy in Spain, with its implied threat to British interests in the Mediterranean; Germany's economic isolation; and her need for a loan from the City of London; Germany's possible return to the League of Nations; the true meaning of the anti-Comintern pact signed by Germany, Italy and Japan, and the prospects for a general European settlement which would include reduction of armaments and removal of war scares.

Talks to Be Informal.

Both Hitler and Chamberlain have repeatedly declared that their countries wanted peace with each other, and now Chamberlain ventures to translate his words into action. The Berlin talks will be the nature of informal conversations rather than concrete negotiations. Negotiations will be undertaken promptly if Halifax makes a favorable report back to London.

Lord Halifax will depart for Germany next Monday, unless public reaction against his proposed mission is so strong as to compel Chamberlain to abandon the idea.

When news of the Government's decision reached the House of Commons, Government spokesmen caused much amusement by insisting that Halifax was invited to Berlin as a fox hunter and sportsman, rather than as a politician and reputed head of the pro-German bloc within the Cabinet.

Inquirers were assured by Lord Halifax himself that the reports that he was bound for Berlin on a political mission probably arose from an invitation which he had received, presumably in his capacity as master of fox hunters, to visit the Berlin hunting exhibition recently opened by Gen. Goering and subsequently to join the General in a shooting party.

Lord Halifax's Admission.

Lord Halifax admitted he had been considering a visit of this kind and that if he went to Berlin he would take the opportunity of making such political contacts there as might be found convenient. He said he had not yet decided whether he could find time for a trip through Germany.

The Foreign Office would neither confirm nor deny the reports of the Berlin mission.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 11.—The 1937 Nobel prize for literature was awarded today to the French author, Martin Du Gard.

Du Gard wrote a series of novels, "Les Thibaults."

When "Les Thibaults" first appeared it won for Du Gard the French literary award, Prix de Concourt. This work, along the lines of John Galsworthy's "Forsyte Saga," follows the development of a typical French family through many years.

Du Gard is a member of the board of the French literary publication Nouvelles Litteraires, of which his brother, Maurice Du Gard, is editor.

C. J. Davison of New York and G. P. Thomson of London received the 1937 Nobel prize in physics.

Davison, born in Bloomsbury, Ill., won the Comstock prize of the National Academy of Science in 1928 for the research in electricity, magnetism and radiant energy.

Thomson is a professor of physics at the Imperial College of Science. His line of research includes electricity and aerodynamics.TROTSKYIST CELL' REPORTED

Under Arrest.

WARSAW, Nov. 11.—Breaking his rule not to travel across Nazi Germany, Foreign Commissar Litvinov, on an urgent summons to return to Moscow, passed through Warsaw yesterday on his way from Brussels by way of Berlin. During a 33-minute stopover here he engaged in animated conversation with Jan Vinogradov, Soviet chargé d'affaires.

A "Trotskyist cell" was alleged to have been discovered in the Soviet Embassy here yesterday, with Mme. Maxakova, celebrated opera singer, wife of the Soviet envoy involved. Those understood to be under arrest include George Alex-androv, press attaché; Maj. Baranov, assistant military attaché, and the representative of the Tass Agency. He is the third representative of the official Soviet press agency who has been removed from the Warsaw embassy for alleged connection with the Trotskyites.

It was noted here that Viktor Podolski, Soviet Minister to Lithuania, who was formerly a counselor at the Embassy here, is among the diplomatic representatives in Europe now being "purged."

TRIPOLI, Nov. 11.—The papal legate, Cardinal Dolci, opened the National Eucharistic Congress here yesterday, with an attack on atheism, which he said is spreading from Orient to Occident.

"May I pay tribute to all those in the world who by prayer, by word and especially by vigorous actions are stemming the tide of atheism," the Cardinal said, adding that atheism is "attempting to demolish the secular institution of Christian civilization."

In an earlier address, Cardinal Dolci expressed the hope that the congress "will be a ray of light projecting its beneficial rays even on those ferocious Bolshevik persecutors."

Modifying of Some Nuisance Taxes, In-

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—Contrasting pictures of the Federal budget situation were painted last night by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, speaking for the New Deal, and Senator Byrd (Dem.) of Virginia, speaking for the economy bloc in Congress and the country, in addresses before the Academy of Political Science in New York. Both advocated reduction of expenditures during the fiscal year beginning July 1 next year but disagreed as to what the final outcome.

Morgenthau accepted President Roosevelt's estimates that the deficit for the current fiscal year would be $895,000,000 and asserted that the budget could be balanced by June 30, 1939, if $700,000,000 could be saved by curtailing expenditures for public roads, public works, unemployment relief and agriculture.

Byrd ridiculed the idea of a balanced budget under the present spending policies of the New Deal.

"We are told that a balanced budget is on the way," Byrd observed. "I cannot credit this prophecy. On the contrary, I predict on July 1, 1938, the estimated deficit of $895,000,000 will be at least twice that sum. Without reduced spending the outlook for 1939 is equally gloomy because the business recession as predicted even by government officials for 1938 and already felt by business men will be reflected in revenue receipts for the 1939 fiscal year. My reasons for predicting a much larger 1938 deficit are: First, the revenue will not reach the estimates, and second, that the President has allowed only $180,000,000 in his estimate for deficiency and new appropriations in the next eight months, while our deficiency and new appropriations in 1937 were nearly $1,000,000,000."

In using $895,000,000 as the estimated deficit for the current year instead of the $895,000,000 figure used by the President and Morgenthau, Byrd added $200,000,000 for statutory debt retirement.

"Earnest Consideration."

In advocating a reduction of the "pump priming" of industry by Federal expenditures, Morgenthau asked the co-operation of business in "our present difficulties," and promised that the administration would give "earnest consideration" to adjusting the inequalities of the present tax laws. This bid to private industry was interpreted as a friendly gesture by the New Deal toward the groups which have most opposed it. He did not, however, mention by name the two taxes on undistributed corporate profits and on individual capital gains which have been under the heaviest fire from business men.

Morgenthau's speech had been awaited with great interest in Washington and New York, as he was supposed to be speaking for the President on the most important and delicate problem facing the administration. By specifically pointing out where large savings could be made he was more definite than any other spokesman has dared, particularly when he indicated that the Government was considering a reduction of farm subsidies. This proposal, if carried out, will be contrary to the plan of the farm bloc in Congress for the special and regular sessions.

Two Important Concessions.

Throughout his speech, the Secretary sought the support of big business, but conditioned his promises on co-operation with the administration. Two important concessions were proposals to modify some of the "nuisance taxes" and to increase the number of persons paying income taxes.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—Italy finally has joined the Mediterranean patrol, it was disclosed today.

Italy has contributed 30 to 40 warships to the patrol against unidentified ships and planes which have attacked merchant shipping. Britain and France have had some 150 warships in the patrol for nearly two months under the accord, drafted at Nyon without Italian participation.

Italy at first declined to join the guard, after Russia charged that Italian ships were responsible for the attacks, and because Italy was not given equality with other powers in the patrol. Italy denied the Russian charges. A compromise was effected by naval technicians conferring last month in Paris.

A Salute to Elijah P. Lovejoy.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

LAST Sunday the Negro people throughout America paid homage to Elijah P. Lovejoy, the "martyr abolitionist." There were sermons, speeches, programs. Young people read from Dunbar and Negro choral groups were to be heard singing "Go Down Moses" with great feeling. On appropriate dates and in like manner, all of the heroic white and Negro people who worked and fought for the crushing of chattel slavery are honored. Every city with a sizable Negro population, which is forced into a black ghetto and denied the full privileges of citizenship, has some institution bearing the name of Abraham Lincoln or Frederick Douglass.

In greater St. Louis, Lovejoy naturally comes in for his share. There are the Lovejoy apartments in St. Louis proper, and across the river in Illinois lies an incorporated Negro community of some 3000 people whose legal name is Brooklyn but whose citizens persist in calling it Lovejoy. They pronounce it with a swing and feeling.

Around Lovejoy's life and times revolved some unique contradictions. Lovejoy was born in New England, where West Indies molasses was converted into rum used to purchase slaves in Africa; he edited a church paper which was opposed because he lent its columns to discussions on the disreputable, indecent question of slavery; he studied theology at Princeton, which still smells of those days because of its refusal to accept Negro students; he was forced to leave St. Louis, but Alton, just 25 miles away, received him; he refused to unload one of his presses on Sunday, but on that night his pro-slavery opponents dumped it into the Mississippi; Missouri, from which he was chased, later wrote into its Constitution his philosophy on the freedom of the press.

Lovejoy, a white man, hated slavery with all his heart and mind. He was put to death in Illinois, not by people who were inherently bad and immoral but by people who were defending their economic interests. Missouri, before Illinois had a vested interest in this vicious institution, and that is why he was first chased from St. Louis.

Angelo Herndon, a young Negro man, hated with all his heart and mind the wretchedness borne by the poor whites and Negroes in Georgia. In Atlanta, he went about violating all that the Old South stands for by organizing into one unit, without regard to race, the poor people of Atlanta. Herndon's freedom is the result of forces he helped set in motion during his "free" days in Atlanta.

It is unfortunate that both of these men are not living today, for I believe they would enjoy each other's company, because they are of the same breed, because both are genuine products of the American soil.

We salute you, Lovejoy.

SIDNEY R. WILLIAMS.

A Challenge.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

AS we observe the nineteenth Armistice Day, hopes for peace are shattered. I am reminded of a memorial church window, Christ, the Good Shepherd. It presents a challenge: Dare we achieve the art of living together as nations?

HASTENING to respond to the appeal of the six woman protesters of the Auditorium parking situation, I offer the following solutions that might serve to foil the greed of the parking lot tycoons:

The six women, united through common bond, would drive to the Symphony in one car, the individual cost for parking would be four and one-sixth cents. Or perhaps...

The women who are forced to eat symphonic cake might thumb their noses at the opulent parking lot owners and use street cars at a dime a ride. At any rate, my heart bleeds for their plight.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

WE are being told Justice Black is a "liberal." A while back, Justices Brandeis and Cardozo were called liberals.

Does this mean that Herr Hitler and Joseph Stalin will be liberals—next week?

A DANGEROUS TENDENCY.

The spectacle of local officials running to the Federal Treasury with cups in their hands is becoming increasingly familiar. It is a menacing business.

We have just received a none-too-subtle piece of propaganda from the United States Conference of Mayors asking some insinuating questions. The following are typical: "Can your city continue to expend local tax funds in the development of your airport in order to meet new Federal rules and regulations? Are not airports in cities forming the backbone of the national airways vested with as much of a national interest as Federal highways and rivers and harbors?"

These questions, we are informed, will be discussed at the annual Mayors' meeting on Nov. 15-17, at Washington. "Out of these discussions," the propaganda reads, "the United States Conference of Mayors, in co-operation with the President and the Congress, hopes to develop a national policy which will provide for equitable distribution of responsibilities as between the cities and the national Government."

This is a polite way of saying that the Mayors' lobby is going to put pressure on the Federal Government for financial help in the construction and maintenance of airports.

St. Louis, as a matter of fact, has just received a large grant of WPA funds to extend the No. 1 runway at Lambert-St. Louis Field to meet blind-landing requirements. Many other cities have received emergency Federal funds, designed for the alleviation of unemployment, for airport construction.

Not content with this, the Mayors' lobby wants to establish a settled policy of Federal contributions for airport expenses. Perhaps a case could be made for such a policy. It is no more ridiculous for the Federal Government to help support local airports than it is for Federal funds to be used to teach farming in local schools.

But unless there is an end to this running to the Federal Treasury for purposes heretofore locally financed and controlled, the already alarming centralization of power in Washington is going to continue, at the expense of the dignity and character of local self-government. When states and communities take Federal funds for their own purposes they also take Federal dictation as to how the money shall be spent. That is the long-range danger. Furthermore, the requests for more and more Federal funds by such groups as the Mayors' lobby offer a formidable obstacle to reduction of Federal expenses and the establishment of a balanced budget.

IT SOON WILL BE TOO LATE.

It is not too late for Gov. Stark and his associates on the Board of Permanent Seat of Government to abandon their plan to erect the new State Government office on the undesirable site on the ridge south of the Capitol.

On earlier occasions, we have discussed the reasons for changing to a better site, preferably that north of the Highway Building, now owned by the State. There is no need to review them all again. It is enough to say that the ground chosen is bad from almost every point of view—engineering, traffic, esthetic, future planning, general convenience. State administrations come and go, but Missouri's magnificent Capitol and its grounds, as they are developed, remain year after year a permanent pride of the State. Only preliminary drilling has been done on the selected site; the location can be changed now without difficulty.

We urge Gov. Stark, Attorney-General McKittrick, Secretary of State Brown, State Treasurer Winn and State Auditor Smith to reconsider while they can.

BRAZIL GOES FASCIST.

It can happen, and has happened in Brazil. It was announced yesterday by Francisco Campos, Minister of Justice, that a new Constitution had been promulgated which establishes a corporative, or Fascist, state. The Constitution, evidently modeled on that of Portugal, abolishes the democratic system set up in 1891, when Brazil adopted a form of government closely akin to our own.

As a familiar Fascist preliminary, a "state of war" was declared on Oct. 2 for the published purpose of coping with an alleged Communist danger, and a tight censorship was clamped down. The use of foes, real and imaginary, as Hitler and Mussolini have repeatedly demonstrated, is very valuable in furthering Fascist ambitions. Under cover of the "state of war" decree, the plot was hatched and worked out in detail.

Brazil's Senate and Chamber of Deputies are destroyed, as well as state Legislatures and municipal assemblies. Deliberative bodies have no place in Fascist countries. Power is vested in the President, who holds office for an indeterminate period, and a corporate assembly is given limited jurisdiction, while a council of elders is permitted certain "powers of opinion."

While Getulio Vargas is President of Brazil, the country's imitation Hitler appears to be Campos, who, after the 1930 revolt, organized a khaki-shirt society known as the October Legion, to "guard the principles of the revolution."

We may well look with misgivings on the first Fascist invasion of this hemisphere. The germ has spread alarmingly in Europe and has left misery and destruction in its wake. Will it also make headway in South America, crushing human liberties and the spirit of democracy, and reversing a century-old struggle against the evils of imperialism?

IBSEN AFTER A HALF-CENTURY.

The current playing in St. Louis of "A Doll's House" by a talented company is a reminder, as well-acted Ibsen revivals always are, of the debt which modern society owes to the grim Norseman who could give the stage such vital characters as Nora and Hedda Gabler and Mrs. Alving in the '80s and '90s. Points of view have changed so much in the half-century which has run through the time glass that it seems scarcely possible that Ibsen could have been cursed, not to say ostracized, for coming to grips with the social pretenses and blindness of his age. Nora Helmer's offense is not the outrage that it was when the world of the theater was first introduced to her. And in a day when divorce is common, her solution of her problem, while still dramatic, does not shock those who look on as once it did.

But one after another, Ibsen's dramas brought down storms of wrath on his head until he must have sickened of the ignorance as well as the dullness of his time. Today, when these same plays are presented, we go, in large part, to see how superior acting can give a freshness to their more or less dated situations. Here is the complete answer to those ever-present, self-appointed regulators of the theater's morals, but they, like the fuming critics of Ibsen's age, are blind to the obvious.

THE WINDORS have postponed their trip to the good old U. S. A.; Manhattan swanky hostesses are speechless with dismay;

act? Such things, however, are what Florida citizens may expect if they do not rise up and shake off the brutal rule that now blackens the name of their State.

J. RAMSAY MACDONALD.

It is a noteworthy coincidence that the world mourns the passing of former Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald of England at the same time it observes the nineteenth anniversary of the armistice of the war he strove so heroically to prevent. For it was as an ardent pacifist, an outspoken and unbending opponent of Britain's entry into the World War, that he earned the confidence of the working people of his country which was eventually to make him the head of the first Labor Government.

The judgment of history may well vindicate his stand against the war, but throughout the struggle and for some years thereafter, he suffered opprobrium and ostracism such as no ordinary man could have withstood. His party deserted him. When he addressed a public meeting, he had to leave by a rear door and with a police guard to keep from being mobbed. Had he attempted to visit the United States at any time prior to 1922, he probably would have been barred as a dangerous alien.

But he stuck to his convictions. By 1922, he had regained his seat in the Commons, and two years later he became Prime Minister. His turn at the helm in this instance lasted only eight months, and when he became Prime Minister again, in 1929, he was destined to have to make another crucial decision—one which was to leave him permanently and bitterly estranged from the people with whom he had carved out his career.

This time, the world depression presented economic and political problems which, growing ever heavier, caused the Labor Government to sway and totter. Defeat on a dozen "minor" issues was ignored, but by the summer of 1931, it had become a question of whether Prime Minister MacDonald should resign and face almost certain defeat in the subsequent election, or whether he should continue in power with a coalition of Conservatives, Liberals and such elements of his own party as would follow him in this maneuver.

His choice to head the coalition is generally regarded by the Laborites as a betrayal of their party. Certainly it dealt the Labor party a blow from which it has been slow to recover. It is equally certain that the coalition Government was dominated by Labor's political foes and that it enacted, forthwith, legislation which Premier MacDonald's old party opposed. Politically, it left him friendless and alone, a Samson shorn of his locks, an Ishmael in the sight of those with whom for decades he had fought side by side.

Whether his decision was, in effect, a statesmanlike compromise or an act of political opportunism may be left to the judgment of history.

It may be said in his defense that he was caught in the vortex of economic forces set in motion by a catastrophe of war which he had done his utmost to prevent. On the other hand, it is impossible to overlook his part in scuttling the English Labor party and bringing into power a Government whose international policies have been vacillating, ineffective and ominously tolerant of totalitarianism in Central and Southern Europe.

Making his way up from direst poverty, educating himself with pennies needed to stay actual hunger, this Scottish orator and statesman has been called the "British Abraham Lincoln." Had he been removed from the scene before August, 1931, he would have had a good claim to the title. But he was spared.

His grasp and vision in international affairs are perhaps his best claim to exalted stature among the men of his time. His intellect and character show strongest in his utterances and accomplishments with regard to the peace movement, disarmament, international arbitration and problems of world trade. To see how he stood out in these fields, it is necessary to visualize him in relation to his contemporaries.

PARKING ON WIDENED CHESTNUT.

Following a storm of protest, the Municipal Auditorium Commission has agreed to sponsor an ordinance to permit free multiple parking on widened Chestnut street in Memorial Plaza for the convenience of persons attending events at the Auditorium.

The ban on multiple parking was placed some time ago at the request of owners of garages and parking lots, who thereby sought to increase their revenues. It ran counter to the interests of the people as a whole, who paid for the Auditorium and for the widening of Chestnut street and who should be entitled to use their own property.

To build a great community center without providing ample parking facilities was a mistake, rectified by using Chestnut street, and to ban the use of that street not only caused a great deal of inconvenience and added expense, but threatened the successful operation of the symphony and other public or quasi-public entertainments.

We hope the Aldermen will pass the bill promptly.

REVERSING the trend of the last few years, gold is being shipped out of the United States. Gold is now valued abroad at more than the United States price of $35 an ounce. Gold now seems to be cheap in terms of dollars, whereas until recently the United States was thought to be paying too much for it in dollars.

The outflow of gold from the United States is supposed to be due largely to speculation. At least, the Federal Reserve Bulletin for November finds that the movement has little to do with sales of American securities by foreigners. And in the last several months, merchandise exports have again exceeded imports, so gold has not been going out to redress an "unfavorable" balance of trade. To some extent gold is being repatriated by foreigners, especially French, who sent it here when property made their country seem the best refuge for refuge.

Suppose we figure back. A musically talented boy who was 18 years old in 1914 would normally have been in a conservatory of music. Today, at the age of 41, he would just be emerging into his most fruitful period of creative activity. But those boys weren't in the conservatory in 1914. They were in the army. They were at the front, facing death. And most of them died. And the stronger, the healthier, the more alert and intelligent they were, the more certain they were of being taken into the army, and the surer of being killed. Not many 18-year-olds lived through those four years.

To me, the most sickening war pictures ever printed used to appear in the pages of the Illustrated London News and the Sketch and the Graphic, between 1914 and 1918. They were the portraits of young English officers who had been killed in action . . . page after page, week after week, year after year, of those slaughtered boys of 18 and 20. They were officers, of course. The dead private soldiers outnumbered them 10 to 1. England lost 900,000 men in the war; France, Germany and Italy lost over 1,000,000 apiece; Russia lost nearly 2,000,000. Killed. Not casualties.

Now do you think you know what became of a whole generation of potential composers, painters, poets, novelists, playwrights, architects, sculptors? Europe murdered them . . . a whole generation of them.

Travel through the battlefields of Europe. Visit the cemeteries of England, France, Italy, Rumania, Germany, Poland, Austria, Russia. Somewhere among those rows and heaps of skeletons you will find what is left of those who should have been the geniuses of today.

If great men are to walk the earth again, we shall have to look for them, largely, I think, among a generation that is not yet ready, a generation that was too young to kill and be killed 23 years ago. And if the world keeps its feet upon the road that it seems to be walking, it may well be that even that generation will be murdered, too;

if we shall have to give up hope for great art and great artists until the race of man has grown intelligent enough to avoid this bloody, profitless, imbecile business that it calls war.

Chicago schools have barred the multiplication table, but Washington is making us all experts in subtraction.

"THE MEN I KILLED."

War: The Graveyard of Genius

Europe has 44 living composers whom music critics rates as distinguished, but only three of them are under 40; explanation is that young men of promise were murdered in 1914-18, with a whole generation of artists in other fields; writer fears end of great art unless man quits the "bloody, profitless, imbecile business" of war.

PEAKING of great men—and whoever

discusses music is bound to do so—it is disturbing to notice that no new musical names of any considerable importance seem to be appearing on the horizon, that among them there seem to be no comparably young composers to whom we look to be the Be

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Fascism and Brazil

VIRGINIO GAYDA, the chief press agent of the Italian Fascist regime, who in Italy performs something of the same function that Dr. Goebbels does in Germany, came out with a blast on Monday prophesying that the Italian-German-Japanese anti-Communist bloc would soon win new members, and citing as possible adherents Poland, Switzerland, Portugal, and Brazil. For Americans, the last-named Power is the most important, for that would bring the ideological struggle which has become the curse of Europe into the Western Hemisphere.

Actually, the Fascist International, which works for the interests of Italy, Germany and Japan by undermining the governments of other countries, boring from within, has already made serious headway in Brazil. Brazil furnishes a beautiful example of the technique which the Fascist employs, and is worth some careful attention from all countries which may be the next victims.

Brazil is a federation of seven states. It has a population of about 100,000,000, of whom some three-fifths are native-born. The others are immigrants, almost entirely from countries already Fascistic—Portugal, Italy, Spain, Germany and Japan. The German population is chiefly concentrated in two southernmost states, "Santa Catherina and Rio Grande do Sul."

These German colonies have always been carefully nursed by Germany, since long before Hitler's time, and numerous towns are exclusively German, and, indeed, speak only, or chiefly, German. They have been kept so by subsidized schools, subsidized patriotic societies and teachers and professors sent out from the Fatherland.

A correspondent of the London Times recently described how Nazi Germany has exploited this to the utmost with propaganda, drilling and, of course, espionage among the Germans themselves, to find out who were loyal Nazis and who were not.

Beginning by Nazifying all Germans, the process is then extended to the rest of the population, so that today in Blumenau and Porto Alegre, chief towns of the two states, not only the citizens of German ancestry but most of the rest of the younger population belong to the Hitler Youth. Their oath of allegiance is renewed every two months. Festivities are staged in the Nazi manner, and every winter contributions to the winter relief are obligatory. Half of the amount collected goes to Germany! The rest remains in Brazil—in the hands of the local Nazi agents.

The Nazi organizations blacklist non-business and society all groups to Nazi-ism. And the Fatherland is making determined efforts to subdue the German population in Brazil. German children in the Brazilian ports are instructed to sail aboard prospective mothers, so that their children, who would otherwise be Brazilian citizens, may be born under the German flag. Prizes are offered for large German families, and the same racial doctrines are preached there.

The proclaimed unity of the three Fascist Powers and their collaboration on a common program simply means that the Germans have

CANADIAN JUMPERS WIN AT HORSE SHOW

U. S. and Irish Free State Tie for Third — Kansas City Woman Wins Ribbons.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—Canadian Army officers won the international military team jumping championship last night before a crowd of more than 15,000 at the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden.

Paced by the performance of Lieut. Marshall Cleland on Roxana, the Canadians compiled the low aggregate of 12 faults to take back the United States, Irish Free State, Belgium and the Netherlands.

The victory, coming after 12 years of failure, gave the Canadians, led by Capt. Stuart Bate, two of the major military trophies of the show, which closed last night. Previously, they had won the three-night competition for the low score challenge trophy.

Bogart Team Second.

Second place went to the Belgians, returning to the national after an absence of eight years, with 15 faults. The United States, beaten every year since 1933, and the Irish, victors two years ago, tied for third with 20 errors each but the Irish won the toss for third place ribbons. The Dutch had 28 errors. Each country was permitted to jump four horses with the score of the best three counting.

Anyone who has followed the policies of the Comintern must be aware of how cynically opportunistic it is. It trims the sails of its program to the winds of Russian foreign policy, is for war against liberals today and for cooperation with them tomorrow, precisely as fits the Russian needs.

Daily it is being demonstrated that democracies, parliamentary or constitutional governments, have totally inadequate defenses against this kind of attack. Civil liberties are being exploited not only by those who once in power would destroy them, but by the openly declared agents of foreign Powers.

The German Government at Stuttgart declared officially through the Foreign Minister that it intended to organize its German groups everywhere, including the United States, precisely as they have been organizing in Brazil. We find it difficult to believe. We find it impossible to take seriously. But is it not also impossible to believe in undeclared wars? In sudden unannounced assaults on women and children?

Grey Knight Crowned.

Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Grey Knight was crowned hunter champion at the matinee, and at night Mrs. Whitney was awarded the H. E. Manville Amateur Victory Challenge trophy for being the leading amateur exhibitor. Mrs. Whitney won seven first places with her hunters, the majority of which she rode herself, but yielded blue ribbon honors to Mrs. Loula Long Combs of Kansas City who accounted for 11 classes, including the championship of the harness horses with Captivation. A. B. Dick was a runner-up in blue ribbons with nine.

Delaine Hours, five-gaited saddle horse, won the championship of his division for Hubert S. Silberman's Delaine Farm of Glenview, Ill.

ST. LOUIS SYMPHONY TO PLAY NEW TANSMAN COMPOSITION

Variations on a Theme of Frescobaldi to Receive World Premiere

This Week.

Variations on a Theme of Frescobaldi, written at the request of Conductor Vladimir Golschmann by Alexandre Tansman, Polish composer and pianist, will receive its world premiere in this week's program of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra at the Municipal Auditorium tomorrow afternoon and Saturday night.

The major offering on the program, which is without a soloist, is Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. The complete program follows:

Variations on a Theme of Frescobaldi—Alexandre Tansman (Andante cantabile) Variations I (Un poco meno lento) Variations II (Un poco meno lento) Variations III (Allegro vivo) Variations IV (Adagio lento) Variations V (Allegro risoluto); "Escalas" (Porto de Call) —Ibert Tone from "Don Juan" (after Niccolò Lenau) Symphony No. 5 in C Minor, Opus 67—Beethoven

Dutch Apple Cake With Cinnamon Cream.

Two cups flour. Three teaspoons baking powder. One-half teaspoon salt. One-half teaspoon sugar. Six tablespoons butter. Two-thirds cup milk. One egg. Three large apples. Four tablespoons melted butter. One-fourth cup brown sugar. One-half teaspoon cinnamon. Few grains nutmeg.

Mix and sift the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in the six tablespoons butter with two knives or rub in with the fingers. Stir in the milk and slightly beaten egg. Spread the apples then cut each into wedge shaped pieces. Arrange on the top of the dough, in even rows, pressing the pointed edges downward. Pour the four tablespoons of melted butter over the top, sprinkle with the brown sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg mixed together. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for 30 to 40 minutes or until the apples are tender. Serve with cinnamon cream made as follows:

One-half cup whipping cream. One-half teaspoon cinnamon. Two teaspoons sugar.

Whip the cream and add cinnamon and sugar. Serves six to eight.

HOT WATER PASTRY

One-fourth cup boiling water. One-half cup shortening. One and one-half cups flour. One-half teaspoon salt. Pour boiling water over shortening, beating until creamy. Cool. Add flour and salt; mix to a soft dough with a fork. Wrap in waxed paper and chill thoroughly before rolling. Makes one nine-inch pie.

TOMATO CHEESE SAUCE

One can tomato soup.
One-quarter teaspoon salt.
One-quarter teaspoon paprika.
One cup grated American cheese.
Heat soup in double boiler, add seasonings, and beat in the cheese with a wire whisk. When cheese has entirely melted sauce is ready. Makes one and one-half cups sauce.

GINGERBREAD CUSTARD

One cup crumbled ginger bread.
Three cups milk.
Three egg yolks, slightly beaten.
Sugar to taste.
Three egg whites beaten.
Pour the milk over the crumbs and let stand for a few minutes. Add the beaten egg yolks and a little sugar if the mixture is not sweet enough. Fold in about half of the beaten egg white, turn into a baking dish or individual custard cups, set in a pan of hot water and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) or until the custard is firm. Add one tablespoon sugar to the remaining egg and drop this by spoonfuls on top of the custard a few minutes before removing from oven.

MACARONI IMPERIAL

One cup uncooked macaroni, broken in one-inch pieces.
Three egg yolks, slightly beaten.
One-fourth cup melted butter.
Three tablespoons red pepper, finely chopped.
Three tablespoons green pepper, finely chopped.
One and one-half teaspoons scraped onion.
One and one-half teaspoons salt.
One cup grated American cheese, and one-half cup milk, scalded.
Three egg whites, stiffly beaten.
Cook macaroni in large amount of boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Combine bread crumbs, butter, red and green pepper, onion, salt and cheese. Add milk. Pour over egg yolks, stirring well. Add macaroni; then fold in egg whites. Pour into well greased casserole, place in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 60 to 70 minutes or until firm.

QUICK MEALS NEED
SOME IMAGINATION

A Substantial Oven Dish, a Crisp Salad and a Dessert Should Suffice.

CHILI CON CARNE

One and one-half cups red chili beans or No. 2 kidney beans.
One large sliced onion.
One chopped green pepper.
One pound ground beef.
One tablespoon fat, melted.
One No. 2½ can tomatoes.
One-eighth teaspoon paprika.
Three whole cloves.
One bay leaf.
One-eighth teaspoon cayenne pepper.

These are busy weeks, these weeks, before the holidays and when the housewife has her time filled either with soliciting funds for charity club meetings or just showing meals are apt to suffer and the family begins to complain.

Quick meals should be part of every woman's cookery repertoire. Canned goods, of course, are the answers to most meals that are prepared in record time but here, too, a certain amount of imagination is required to keep the family temper smooth. It is possible to prepare quick casserole meals which have all the food value and eye-appeal of the meal that requires hours to prepare.

Where meals are quick the main dish should be a substantial one.

You might lead off with a cream soup of some kind and follow with an oven dish which combines vegetables with meat, thus eliminating one of the dishes. A crisp salad and a dessert, made in the morning, will help substantially and there should be no complaints from the about two hours, adding water if necessary. Just before serving combine sauce with equal amount of beans. Serves six.

Cheese Tidbits.
One-half pound American cheese, one-fourth pound butter, one cup flour (enough to make a stiff dough), few grains cayenne pepper. Grate cheese and cream with butter. Add flour gradually and mix to a stiff dough. Form with hands into balls. Bake about 10 minutes in a hot oven, 425 degrees Fahrenheit. Serve hot or cold.

A Bellah.
A teaspoon of freshly grated horseradish, added to cooked, sliced beets will give a pleasing flavor. Serve with roast beef.

PEARS PLAY PART IN VARIED DAILY MENU

They Contain Vitamins and Minerals and May Be Used in Salads and Desserts.

Pears are among the more interesting of the harvest fruits. True, we always consider them when planning a fruit bowl of some kind but very few of us know them and the way in which they may fit into the menu.

Pears, once grown in secluded gardens by French monarchs, have been available for every table for some time. They are an important part of the family diet since they contain vitamins A, B and C as well as minerals in the form of calcium, phosphorus, iron and copper.

Many housewives have been using pears in fruit salads. The halved pear with cream cheese is perhaps the most popular of these. Pears may be combined with apples in a Waldorf, or molded salad. They offset the tart sweetness of the citrus fruits in an orange or grapefruit salad. Here are a few suggestions for using pears in the daily menu.

Baked Pears.

Peel six pears and drop into cold water to which a little lemon juice has been added. Make a syrup of one cup sugar, three-fourths cup water and juice of one-half lemon. Cook for 5 minutes, then place pears in a baking dish and pour the syrup over them. Cover and bake slowly in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until tender, about 45 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking for 5 minutes. Chill and serve with cream.

Pears may be cored and a spoonful of mincemeat placed in the cavity before baking.

Pear Pie.

One pie crust.
Quarted peeled pears.
One cup sugar.
One-third cup water.
Dash of ginger.
One-half teaspoon cinnamon.
Few drops of lemon juice.

Line a pie pan with the pastry and fill with peeled quartered pears. Sprinkle with sugar, water and cinnamon and ginger. Dot with bits of butter and cover with a lattice top or a perforated crust. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for 10 minutes, then reduce heat and continue baking for 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees). Serve warm with cheese.

Pear Shortcake.

To regular biscuits add one-half cup chopped nut meats. For filling use:

Three cups sliced pears.
Two tablespoons lemon juice.
Six tablespoons sugar.

Place filling between lightly buttered biscuits. Sprinkle with sugar and a dash of ginger. Dot with butter and cover with whipped cream.

Pear and Ginger Betty.

Two cups soft stale crumbs.
Two cups pears, peeled, cored and cut in pieces.

One-half cup sugar.
Four tablespoons melted butter.
Few grains of salt.

Two tablespoons chopped prepared ginger.

Mix the bread crumbs with the melted butter. Cover the bottom of a baking dish with a layer of crumbs, cover with sliced pears, sugar and ginger and repeat until pears have been used, reserving enough crumbs to cover top. Cover and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 minutes. Uncover and bake until brown. Serve with cream.

How to Get Real Pork Sausage

Not all "pork sausage" is pork! Some is a mixture of pork and cereal—or other meats. The flavor wouldn't fool anybody. But you can't tell the difference in the carton! So buy a brand you know is pure pork, and all pork. Armour's Star Pork Sausage contains nothing but tender morsels of pure pork. No scraps of other meat. No cereal. No "filler" of any kind.

The only thing added to Armour's Star Pork Sausage is a blend of pungent Tropical spices ground to powder fineness.

Try this winning dish—morning, noon or night; phone your dealer now for the sausage! Specify Armour's and be sure of a pure, unadulterated pork product.

Don't be Fooled by Fillers! When You Buy Armour's Star Pork Sausage You Get Pork.

• Armour's Meal of the Month is out today! It's a cold weather winner—built around good old pork sausage. The main dish is pork sausage and French toast. It's the most appetizing combination of the year, when those sizzling sausages are real pork—pure pork and nothing else.

How to Make this Meal

Use pure pork sausage, a pound for six people. Prick each sausage with a fork, place on broiler rack four inches under flame. Broil ten to twelve minutes, turning once.

For the French toast use six slices of day-old bread; remove crusts and halve diagonally. Take 1½ cups diluted evaporated milk and ¼ teaspoon of salt with two eggs, beaten slightly. Dip the bread, drain and pan-fry slowly until crisp and

ROUND OF BEEF HAS FOUR DISTINCT PARTS

They Contain Vitamins and

Cook for 5 minutes, then place pears in a baking dish and pour the syrup over them. Cover and bake slowly in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until tender, about 45 minutes. Remove cover and continue baking for 5 minutes. Chill and serve with cream.

Pears may be cored and a spoonful of mincemeat placed in the cavity before baking.

Pear Pie.

One pie crust.
Quartered peeled pears.
One cup sugar.
One-third cup water.
Dash of ginger.
One-half teaspoon cinnamon.
Few drops of lemon juice.
Line a pie pan with the pastry and fill with peeled quartered pears. Sprinkle with sugar, water and cinnamon and ginger. Dot with bits of butter and cover with a lattice top or a perforated crust. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) for 10 minutes, then reduce heat and continue baking for 30 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees). Serve warm with cheese.

Pear Shortcake.

To regular biscuit dough add one-half cup chopped nut meats. For filling use:

Three cups sliced pears.

Three tablespoons lemon juice.
Six tablespoons sugar.
Place filling between lightly buttered crusts as well as on top. Serve plain or with whipped cream.

Pear and Ginger Betty.

Two cups soft stale crumbs.
Two cups pears, peeled, cored and cut in pieces.
One-half cup sugar.
Four tablespoons melted butter.
Few grains of salt.
Two tablespoons chopped pared ginger.

INDIVIDUAL STUFFED STEAKS.
Round steak, one and one-half inches thick.

One cup mushrooms.
Five or six crackers, rolled.
One-quarter cup cream.
Three tablespoons lard.
Salt and pepper.

Have the round steak cut into individual portions. With a sharp knife, make a pocket in each piece. Make a dressing of the mushrooms and rolled crackers and moisten with cream. Sprinkle the steak with salt and pepper and fill the pocket with dressing. Sew or skewer the edges of the pocket together. Brown on all sides in hot lard, transfer to a baking dish and add a little hot water, cover closely and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until tender, about one and one-half hours.

POTTED BEEF STEAKS.

Six steaks, cut from the round.
Flour for dredging.
Lard for browning.

One large onion, sliced.
Three or four carrots.

One cup catsup.
Two cloves.
Two bay-leaves.

Salt and pepper.
Have the steaks cut one inch thick and in pieces for individual servings. Dredge with flour and brown on both sides in hot lard. Add sliced onions and carrots, the spices catsup and one cup hot water. Season with salt and pepper, cover tightly and let cook slowly on top of stove or in oven until tender, about one hour.

TOP ROUND MOST TENDER.

The top round is the most tender part of the round. Although the round contains more connective tissue than the loin or ribs, it is frequently tender enough so that these steaks may be broiled, like the porterhouse and sirloin steaks, which are most frequently chosen for broiling.

DEVILED ROUND STEAK.
One and one-half pounds round steak.

Three tablespoons lard.

Three tablespoons diced onion.

One teaspoon mustard.

Three tablespoons flour.

One cup canned tomatoes.

One cup water.

One tablespoon vinegar.

One-half teaspoon sugar.

One-quarter teaspoon paprika.

Cut the steak into suitable pieces for serving. Salt and dredge with flour and brown on all sides in the lard. Mix the flour and mustard and add to the tomatoes. Pour over the steak with the water, vinegar, salt, sugar and paprika. Cover and cook over a low fire or in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 24 hours. Unmold, garnish with whipped cream.

Turkey With Trimmings In American Pattern

Skillful Cooking and Carving and Combining Foods to Go With It Enhance Natural Goodness.

"Turkey with trimmings" has vied strains of turkeys to meet this need. The experiment has been going on for about two years. The birds this year show that the scientists are progressing toward their goal. It is probable that these tailored-to-order turkeys will be used in markets sometime in the future.

From the weight of the turkey, the cook can figure how soon before the meal to start her cooking. She'll need to allow about 18 to 20 minutes per pound for a young bird, depending upon her method of cooking. Here again, the weight refers to the undrawn turkey as bought in the market.

An older bird will need to be cooked longer and somewhat differently. One way to tell the age of a turkey is to feel the breast bone. If it is flexible, the turkey is young. Older turkeys have hard breast bones and are heavier for their size than young ones.

Good Ones Well-Fleshed.

Of turkeys of any given age and weight there may be great differences in quality. One may be stringy and tough when cooked, the other juicy and tender. Turkeys of good quality are well-fleshed and well-round. They have a coating of fat underneath the skin. When this coating of fat is lacking the turkey has a blue look showing through the skin over most of the body. Turkeys of good quality are free from blemishes and have few fine feathers.

Most turkeys are sold undrawn with head and feet attached. Those that have already been drawn will naturally cost more per pound because of the weight that has been removed. But pound for pound of meat they usually do not differ greatly in price.

If you are buying a turkey to carve at the table, see that the breast bone is straight. If possible, get a bird whose crop has been removed through a slit in the back of the neck and down one side, so that the breast is unmarred. And when you have the turkey drawn, have a small strip of flesh left under the tail. Then you can tuck the turkey's legs under this during roasting.

You can make sure of all these points by stating your wants to a

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1937

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

dependable dealer or by selecting the turkey yourself. Of the Government-graded turkeys, U. S. prime or U. S. choice are the most desirable grades. However, a turkey of the lower grade, U. S. commercial, may be entirely satisfactory for your needs if you want a lower-priced turkey and do not intend to have it carved at the table.

To tell when a turkey is done insert a skewer or a fork in the thigh next to the breast. If the meat is tender and the juice doesn't leak, the bird is done.

Seasoning Important.

One of the best things about roast turkey is the hot stuffing inside. Just how good this stuffing is depends a lot on the seasoning and the bread that goes into it. Onion, pepper, salt, parsley and chopped celery are seasonings popular with everyone. Sage, thyme and celery seed are stronger and must be used cautiously. Some like nuts, oysters, or raisins in their turkey stuffing. In any case, dry bread picked apart lightly so that it forms crumbs rather than soggy balls will make the stuffing better.

Before stuffing the turkey, singe it and clean it thoroughly. Rub the inside with salt. Then fill the body cavity and the neck cavity with savory stuffing, but don't pack it in too tight. Slip a crust of bread into the opening near the tail to keep the stuffing in. Tuck the legs under the loose strip of skin under the tail and sew up the slit with soft white twine. Fold the neck skin back and fasten it down with a skewer or stitches. Fold the wing tips under the back. If necessary tie them down without letting any string cross the breast to leave marks.

Rub this stuffed, trussed turkey all over with salt and butter. Pat it with flour. Place on a rack in an open roasting pan, breast down, back up. Do not put any water in the roaster. This makes steam draw the juice from the meat.

The simplest way to roast a turkey is to cook it at a constant temperature until it is done. The oven thermometer should be moderate, from 300 to 350 degrees. For smaller birds use the higher temperature. Cook a young turkey in an open roasting pan without a lid. For older turkeys use a lid on the roaster for at least part of the time.

Baste Every Half Hour.

About every half hour baste the turkey with pan drippings and turn it from side to side and now and then on its back. That is, for the most part, keep the breast down and the back up so that the breast meat does not get done too long before the dark meat. A young bird cooked at 300 degrees will require from 15 to 20 minutes per pound of turkey you bought it undrawn.

If you prefer to brown the turkey first, put it in a hot oven (450 degrees) for the first half hour. Put the lid over older turkeys after this preliminary browning but cook young ones in the uncovered roaster throughout. Cook the rest of the time at a very moderate temperature (about 325 degrees). Cooked this way a young turkey should be done when it has been cooked 15 minutes for each pound, again figuring from the weight undrawn. An older turkey will take somewhat longer—about four and one-half hours for one that weighed 15 pounds when you bought it undrawn.

To tell when a turkey is done insert a skewer or a fork in the thigh next to the breast. If the meat is tender and the juice doesn't leak, the bird is done.

PEANUT BUTTER HERMITS

One-half cup peanut butter. One can condensed milk. One cup sifted graham cracker crumbs.

One-quarter teaspoon salt. Blend peanut butter and milk thoroughly and add the salt and crumbs. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased baking sheet. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, about 15 minutes until brown. Remove from pan as soon as baked.

PEACH NUT WHIP

One pint whipping cream. One-half glass currant jelly. Eighteen marshmallows, cut in eighths.

One cup pecans, chopped. Two cups diced canned peaches. Whip cream until stiff. Break jelly up with a fork and fold into whipped cream with nuts, peaches, and marshmallows. Chill well before serving.

ROAST

Remnants, even frankfurters take on glamour—when served with Heinz Cooked Spaghetti! This tempting food changes drab leftovers into enticing dishes in a twinkling!

Just as it comes from the tin—ready to heat and serve—Heinz Spaghetti also makes a marvelous one-dish meal. Heinz cooks the long strands till they're tasty and tender—drenches them in a sauce of Heinz tomatoes, spices, and perky cheese!

You'll find that this savory baste is as economical as it is tasty and nourishing. So keep several tins of Heinz Cooked Spaghetti on your pantry shelf and it will help keep your food budget on an even keel!

FRENCH RECIPES GIVE TOUCH OF AUTHORITY

Way of Preparing Pancakes, Meats and Vegetables Quite Unique.

Wherever you are, if you are interested in good food, you find congenial folk who like to tell of their family's prized recipes. So it is that the notebook in which a grandmother had carefully written down the gems of French cooking as she herself had learned them, came to our attention.

Here is the recipe for crepes suzette copied in the quaint wording in which she inscribed it:

Crepes Suzette.

Place in a bowl one-half pound flour, two ounces of granulated sugar, a pinch of salt and one teaspoon orange juice. Add 5 to 6 eggs whole, mix very well together, stirring constantly with a wooden spoon for about 10 minutes until your batter has acquired a nice consistency. Add one cup of sweet milk, maybe a drop more, and mix again well for about 5 minutes. Strain through a fine sieve. Add a half teaspoon curacao and one of tangerine juice. Brandy, rum or kirsch may be agreeably substituted for curacao.

Just before cooking the little cakes, add to the batter two ounces of melted butter. Use small frying pans for cooking, medium hot, and a slight amount of butter in them. Pour over about one tablespoon of pancake batter and cook once on each side until both are a nice golden brown. These little cakes must be very, very thin.

For serving sauce, place in bowl four ounces of soft, sweet butter, one ounce of tangerine juice, and mix until it becomes creamy. Spread on the cakes and roll them. Be certain to serve them hot.

Corn Meal Souffle.

Cook about one-third cup yellow corn meal. Cool, add three tablespoons melted butter, add dash nutmeg, teaspoon of salt, dash of cloves and milk (about one-half cup). Beat three egg yolks to lemon color, add. Beat three whites stiffly and fold in. Put into greased dish, place in water as custard, and bake in moderate oven until brown.

French Pot Roast.

One five-pound pot roast, wipe with damp cloth, lard with spiced salt pork. Place in earthen casserole and cover with one-third rum and two-thirds water, parsley, bay leaf and marjoram. Let stand over night.

Sear in hot fat. Return to casserole in about three-fourths cup of heated liquor. Bake, covered, in moderate oven three and a half to four and a half hours, turning about four times.

Serve with mixed vegetables.

Petit Pot.

Dice lettuce heart, smother with butter, add fresh cooked peas, sea-salt, sugar, pepper.

Hors D'Oeuvres.

Halve six hard-boiled eggs and put yolks through sieve; add three tablespoons piccilli, salt, dash cayenne, sprinkling of tarragon vinegar, and mayonnaise to bind together. Form into balls, place between two egg-white halves. Fasten together with a toothpick.

Hors D'Oeuvres.

Halve hard-cooked eggs, remove yolks and push through sieve. Add equal parts of pork sausage. Fry in small balls. Serve a ball on each half of hard-cooked egg.

NEVER TOO MANY RECIPES FOR GOOD CHOCOLATE CAKE

Chocolate cake is an ever popular favorite and the woman who entertains can never have too many recipes for this cake. Here is one with an uncooked frosting.

Chocolate Layer Cake.

One-third cup vegetable shortening or butter.

One-half teaspoon salt.

One teaspoon vanilla.

One cup sugar.

One egg, unbeaten.

Two cups sifted flour.

Two and one-half teaspoons baking powder.

Three-quarters cup milk.

Combine vegetable shortening or butter, salt and vanilla. Add sugar gradually and cream until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Sift flour and baking powder together three times. Add small amounts of flour to creamed mixture, alternately with milk, beating after each addition until smooth. Pour batter into two eight-inch layer pans. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees) 20 to 25 minutes. Spread chocolate frosting between layers and on top and sides of cake.

Uncooked Chocolate Frosting.

Two tablespoons shortening. One tablespoon butter. Three ounces chocolate.

Five tablespoons hot milk.

One and one-half cups sifted confectioners' sugar.

One-half teaspoon vanilla.

One-quarter teaspoon salt.

Melt shortening, butter and chocolate together over hot water. Pour hot milk over sugar and stir until sugar is dissolved. Add vanilla and salt. Add chocolate mixture and beat until smooth and thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of two eight-inch layers.

Salt as Seasoning.

Salt has been used as a seasoning for food for so long that historians cannot trace its first use.

CARROT SALAD WITH CHEESE

One-half pound soft grated cheese. One and one-half cups grated raw carrots. One and one-half cup raisins. Two red apples. Mayonnaise. Watercress. Mix grated carrots with raisins and two tablespoons mayonnaise. Mold into six balls. Cut apples into six rings, removing cores and seeds. Arrange on individual plates, placing carrot balls in center of apple rings. Sprinkle balls with grated cheese. Serve with mayonnaise, crisp crackers or thin bread and butter sandwiches.

BAKED STUFFED PEPPERS

Six green peppers. One and one-half cups bread crumbs.

One and one-half cups cooked tomatoes.

One and one-half cups butter.

Two teaspoons minced onion.

Two tablespoons chopped pimento.

One tablespoon chopped onion.

One-fourth teaspoon salt.

One-fourth teaspoon paprika.

One-fourth teaspoon mustard.

Few grains cayenne.

One cup milk.

One cup bread crumbs.

One tablespoon butter.

One egg.

One-half cup buttered cracker crumbs.

Cook, pepper, onions and butter five minutes, stirring constantly. Add flour gradually and stir until well blended. Add milk gradually, blend and bring to boiling point. Brown bread in one tablespoon butter and add with corn and egg. Turn into greased baking dish.

Vacancies in desirable apartments in the city or suburbs are listed in the Post-Dispatch Rental Columns.

Scalloped Corn.

One-half green pepper.

One-half onion, finely chopped.

Two tablespoons butter.

Two tablespoons flour.

One teaspoon salt.

One-fourth teaspoon paprika.

One-fourth teaspoon mustard.

Few grains cayenne.

One cup milk.

One cup bread crumbs.

One tablespoon butter.

Two cups corn.

One egg.

One-half cup buttered cracker crumbs.

Cook, pepper, onions and butter five minutes, stirring constantly. Add flour gradually and stir until well blended. Add milk gradually, blend and bring to boiling point. Brown bread in one tablespoon butter and add with corn and egg. Turn into greased baking dish.

Vacancies in desirable apartments in the city or suburbs are listed in the Post-Dispatch Rental Columns.

Morgenthau and Byrd Give Contrasting View on Budget

from individual earnings and business profits," he said. "We do not wish to impose levies which tend to dry up the sources of tax revenue. The laws should be so written and administered that the taxpayer can continue to make a reasonable profit with a minimum of interference from his own Federal Government; provided that the taxpayer co-operates with his Government in carrying out the purpose and the spirit of the tax laws."

"The amount of our income tax revenue is only about half our total internal revenue. Less than 3,000,000 people out of our total population pay individual Federal income taxes. We would be applying the principle of capacity to pay more justly if we were to reduce the number of consumer taxes and at the same time to increase the number of income tax payers. Taxpayers who are squarely confronted with their own tax burdens are bound to be keenly alive to the way the money is being spent by their Government."

Followed Byrd and Gilbert.

Morgenthau followed Byrd and S. Parker Gilbert, a partner of J. P. Morgan & Co., on the Academy program, and sought to answer their charges that the New Deal "pump priming" had cost more than it was worth. He was heckled at one point in his speech. Byrd had been given an ovation when he had concluded his attack on Government spending.

Admitting that there had been some waste in the disbursement of relief funds, Morgenthau said that this was inevitable in any expenditure of such magnitude.

"But contrasted with the human and material values at stake," he asserted, "such wastes as may have occurred shrink into insignificance."

The governmental spending policy which involved an unbalanced Federal budget for four years, he continued, had succeeded.

"The emergency that we faced in 1933," he declared, "no longer exists."

Many Measures Needed.

Conceding that there is a "declining tendency" in business, that the "speculative markets" are under severe pressure and that there still remains a considerable volume of unemployment, Morgenthau said the present problems required many measures for their solution.

"One of these measures, but only one, in the present juncture," he declared, "is a determined movement toward a balanced budget."

"We are now nearing the end of one of the most active years in the business history of this country. On the whole, this high level of activity has been of a healthy character—not of the character that usually marks an unhealthy boom and precedes a serious depression. The present situation is not characterized by the existence of huge inventories, high interest rates, over-extended credit, positions, or great surpluses of housing and capital equipment. We have not reached the stage of full employment of our productive resources. On the contrary, from all these standpoints, conditions are favorable for a continued increase in the level of business activity."

"This stands in contrast to the unhealthy excesses of 1929. It stands in even sharper contrast to the banking collapse, the bread lines, the bankruptcies, and the general demoralization of 1933."

Driving Force of Capital.

"The basic need today is to foster the full application of the driving force of private capital. We want to see capital go into the productive channels of private industry. We want to see private business expand. We believe that much of the remaining unemployment will disappear as private capital funds are increasingly employed in productive enterprise. We believe that one of the most important ways of achieving these ends at this time is to continue progress toward a balance of the Federal budget."

Byrd declared that the huge Federal deficits had not been due to failures of the revenue, which this year will be highest in history. The solution, he said, was not in increased taxes but decreased expenditures and that only a "major surgical operation" on the regular and emergency budgets would lower the "most stupendous debt any nation has ever carried."

The treasurer head noted that despite the fact that agriculture would receive more than $900,000,000 this year, exclusive of public highway expenditures, "further measures involving large additional expenditures are now being discussed." This was a veiled reference to farm subsidies now being considered by the Senate and House Agricultural Committees.

"The farmer himself does not want subsidies," Morgenthau declared, "but rather a fair price and such balanced production of crops as will make subsidies unnecessary for his recent economic status." He explained that he was for a "long-range program to maintain the independence and purchasing power of the farmer, based on the farmer's opportunities in the foreign markets as well as in those at home. This was his only contribution to solution of the farm subsidy problem, and the

JAPANESE ADMIRAL,
TRAINED IN U. S., DIES

Baron Uriu, Last Survivor of Countrymen Graduated From Annapolis, Succumbs.

By the Associated Press
TOKIO, Nov. 11.—Admiral Baron Sotokichi Uriu, who was the last surviving Japanese graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, died today at his home at Odawara, southwest of Tokyo. He was 80 years old.

Admiral Uriu had prominent roles in both the Chinese-Japanese war of 1894 and the Russian-Japanese war of 1904-5. Emperor Hirohito posthumously promoted him to the senior grade of the second court rank and decorated him with the grand cordon of the rising sun with Paulownia Flower.

Admiral Uriu played an important part in victories which established Japanese naval predominance in the Far East. China's lack of seapower—vital factor in Japan's present conquests—dates from the destruction of the Chinese navy in the Chinese-Japanese war of 1894. Admiral Uriu was chief of staff of the squadron that sank the Chinese cruisers Tien-Yen and Tsin-Yen, then the largest warships in the Orient.

In the Russian war Uriu's squadron blockaded the Korean port of Chemulpo, Feb. 8, 1904, and sank two Russian warships. Uriu's command then was convoying the first Japanese transports carrying troops for the campaigns in Manchuria.

Uriu was sent with two other young Japanese to enter Annapolis. He was granted with the class of 1881, one of the survivors of which is former United States Senator O. E. Weller of Baltimore. On Oct. 26, a Tokio dispatch reported Uriu had ended his life by writing, in defiance of his physician's advice, a letter to Weller explaining Japan's position in the conflict with China.

In the summer of 1922, Admiral Uriu was host to his Annapolis classmates in a reunion in Tokio. Admiral Uriu's wife was an alumna of Vassar, one of the first group of Japanese girls sent to the United States for schooling. She died in 1928.

BELLEVILLE MAN ACCUSED OF THEFT HELD IN KANSAS

Sheriff Notified of Arrest at Eldorado of Edward F. Schott, Sought Since February.

Edward F. Schott, Belleville real estate dealer and insurance agent, sought since last February on a charge of embezzlement $1700 from a client, has been arrested in Eldorado, Kan., Sheriff Henry L. Sleckmann of St. Clair County was informed by telegraph last night.

Schott, whose home and office were at 201 South Sixteenth street, disappeared Feb. 3. A warrant charging him with embezzlement was issued shortly afterward on complaint of Thomas Dickson, Lenzburg (Ill.) grocer, who said he had paid the real estate dealer $1700 the previous October to purchase a mortgage, but had been unable to obtain either the mortgage or a return of the money.

Dispatches from Eldorado said Schott arrived there several weeks ago and set up a business office under an assumed name. If he waives extradition, Sheriff Sleckmann said, deputies will leave immediately to return him to Belleville.

OLD AGE DIRECTOR FREED OF LABOR LAW VIOLATION

Court Holds Miss Juanita Kirkham
Did Not Violate Statute and Dismisses Case.

A motion to quash the charge that Miss Juanita Kirkham, local director of the Missouri Old Age Assistance Bureau, violated the State law providing a maximum work day of nine hours for women was sustained yesterday by Judge James W. Griffin, in the Court of Criminal Correction, and the charge was ordered dismissed.

The Prosecuting Attorney's office issued a warrant against Miss Kirkham on Sept. 24 after a State Labor Bureau inspection reported that she had caused four women employees of her office in the Municipal Courts Building to work 11 hours and 15 minutes in a single day. Miss Kirkham, who furnished $500 bond on the misdemeanor charge, said she was unaware of the nine-hour day law and added that the employees consented to stay overtime to dispose of accumulated work.

Counsel for Miss Kirkham, in arguing the motion to quash last week, contended that the State Labor Bureau was without authority to collect fees for inspecting an office of the executive branch of the State government. The attorney, J. E. Paxton, told the Court that the Labor Bureau had such authority if it could make an inspection of the Governor's office. Judge Griffin sustained the motion on the grounds presented.

WELL, I'LL TELL YOU—By BOB BURNS

THERE'VE been so many women suing their husbands for divorce on grounds of cruelty that I began to wonder where all the brutes were comin' from. I figured it wasn't safe to go out with so many of 'em walkin' the streets. The other day I heard that one of them divorce cases was comin' up in court and I went down just to see what kind of a lookin' monster the husband was. When the case was called, a great big woman got up and walked up to the judge's stand and she says "Judge, I can't live with that man another minute and I want a divorce!" The judge says "On what grounds?" and she says "Cruel, inhuman treatment." The judge says "Is your husband here to contest the case?" and she says "I should say not! That little, measly shrimp is afraid to come in the same room with me!"

Success in Business
By Dale Carnegie

OUR success in business will depend largely upon your ability to influence people to do things your way. Few men make a success by the hammer and hit method. One of the best stories I know is told of John Wanamaker in the early days of his merchant career. He walked into a department one day and saw several customers waiting to be served, while several clerks milled together at the far end of the counter engaged in an animated discussion. Did John Wanamaker call out harshly to them? Did he summon the floorwalker and demand that they be dismissed? No, indeed. All he did was to step behind the counter and serve just one customer himself. Before his package was handed to her, all the other waiting customers were receiving attention.

I was on the Riviera one winter with some American friends. A new nurse had been engaged for the small child of one of them, Mrs. Zelda Langdon Larch, of Chicago. This new nurse had many good traits, but she had some faults that made her a great trial. Mrs. Larch handled the matter as skillfully as any capitalist might have handled a situation involving thousands of dollars. She took a sheet of note paper and wrote:

Things We Like About Our New Nurse:

1. She has a willing nature.
2. She is always pleasant.
3. She knows how to handle little boys and make them like her.
4. She is careful of her personal appearance.

5. She is honest.

The she turned the paper over and wrote on the other side:

Things We Do Not Like About Our New Nurse:

1. She is not punctual.
2. She bites her nails.
3. She is not teaching our son to be considerate of others.

The note was pinned on the nurse's pillow when she was out. No reference was ever made to it beyond the nurse saying the next morning, with an appreciative smile, "I got it, Mrs. Larch."

The air these days is full of preachers against war. I think everybody will agree that Gen. U. S. Grant knew something about war. This is what he said:

"I doubt if ever a war was fought over an issue that couldn't have been better settled in some other way."

Useful Suggestions

Dice the leftover boiled potatoes, add a creamy white sauce, a couple of chopped hard-boiled eggs and one chopped pimento and you have a very interesting dish for the next meal.

Quarter fresh mushrooms and dip the pieces in a plain batter similar to your usual fruit batter for fritters, leaving out any sugar. Fry in deep fat until nicely browned. A delightful little surprise for the luncheon platter.

When buttering sandwiches in wintertime, dip the knife in hot water frequently and the butter will spread readily. If you know about the sandwiches in advance, you can leave the butter out on the kitchen tables for an hour or so before using.

Pineapple Syrup
One can crushed pineapple, one tablespoon granulated orange rind, two tablespoons corn syrup, one-half cup granulated sugar, one cup water. Mix all ingredients in a saucepan. Stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved, then simmer for 15 minutes. Pour into a jar, cover and store in the refrigerator for further use. Delicious over the winter hot cakes and waffles, and mighty good over vanilla ice cream.

SLENDER, SMOOTH, WITH LONG TAPERING FINGERS, THESE ARE THE HANDS OF ELIZABETH KNIGHT.

They Belong to Elizabeth Knight, St. Louis Girl, Who Earns a Nice Income Modeling Them for Advertisements.

By MARGUERITE MARTYN

dentist's assistant.

That isn't saying she hasn't a pretty face, too. With wide-set blue eyes, fair hair slightly auburn, a cute tilted nose, wide smile revealing small, even teeth and a dimple in her cheek, she might almost double for Myrna Loy. Funny how to those who have one physical charm usually are given others!

But we happen to be talking about her hands. They really are lovely, small—she wears a five-and-a-half size glove—slender, smooth, with long, tapering fingers. The nails are thick, but they look like jewels cut by a lapidary set on the ends of her fingers.

It isn't entirely by accident her hands got this way. And here's a hint to mothers who want their infant daughters to develop beautiful hands. "My mother pulled me up to her by the hair of my hands," announced Elizabeth. You get to calling her by her first name right away, she is so small, so ingratiating and so young. "When I was a baby I was very fat and my hands were pudgy. My mother, who has very pretty hands herself, was determined mine should be slender and tapering, so every time she picked me up, she'd pull my fingers to lengthen them and pinch the ends and massage my whole hands with lengthening motions."

OTHERWISE not much has been done to cultivate them. "I haven't had a professional manicure for years," she said, although her mother operates a beauty shop. "I tend my nails myself, filing them with emery board, being careful never to cut them with scissors. And never cut the cuticle, because that makes a ridge, but push it back with an orangewood stick dipped in oil."

Elizabeth's hands are naturally pliable. I never have one break. Of course I use an oil lacquer, not too much, and being careful to clean it off before re-polishing, so it doesn't get bumpy. And I never use dark nail polish. I hate it," she said with a shudder. The tint she uses is a pale coral pink. "Otherwise, to keep my hands smooth, I use only a lotion after having them in water," she added.

Miss Knight has been encouraged by the leading model agency in New York to bring her hands to them for commercialization, and by Hollywood photographers, too, who think she might double for close-ups of hands in the movies. But thus far she finds enough attractive things to occupy not only her hands but a variety of other interests in St. Louis.

She is a young woman of many enthusiasms. She is an accomplished dancer, tap, toe and ballet, loves to dance, and is a devoted movie fan, but she is a serious minded small person, too. She wants most of all to write. On the school paper at Soltan she was motion picture reporter, and now, just for the fun of it, when she sees a picture play, she goes home and writes a review of it.

Personal appearances of the stars find her behind the scenes interviewing them. When Francis Lederer was here introducing his international peace propaganda into personal appearances, she interviewed him and fell heavily for it—or the movie hero. Anyway, since then she has sent him no less than seven telegrams of her pledge card signed. Addressing the dance club and other groups she gathers the signatures. So though pretty hands might justify themselves alone by falling into graceful poses before the camera, she doesn't let them lead her into mischief as idle hands are said to do.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By Louis Sobol

Small Portions:

IT should be news that William Powell and Myrna Loy have received the Academy Award. This will be disputed from coast to coast but the doubt remains that in the picture "Double Wedding" there is a slapstick finish in which Myrna is socked on the jaw and Powell is slapped dizzy. As the picture from their daze are beamed into a coma by a small statue. The statue is "Oscar"—the Academy Award figure!

Herbert Bayard Swope writes: "I read with interest the guest contribution made by Edson. This is an illustration of the dangers of trusting to memory. I found seven errors of fact in it, and that was the result of merely a once-over. I daresay some of your readers have found even more."

Mrs. Vivian Wooley-Hart of London, who owns a spacious island in the Bermuda, is social-whirling in Manhattan currently. Mrs. Wooley-Hart was in unphrased Wooley-Hart the other afternoon. She inspected various nickel and dime trinkets. The reason a few of the salesgirls looked as if they might faint at any second was not because they were overworked. It last," solemnly announced Mr. Plankinton.

In a discussion with an advertising executive, we learned that the highest price ever paid for a single endorsement of a commercial product went to the astute Dizzy Dean—$7500. Average endorsement pay back players is $150—stage stars as high—but rarely higher—than $750. Society girls are satisfied with $50 plus a good picture, and in those endorsements where famous people—usually screen stars—make some statement which does not actually endorse but which the advertiser ties up with the product, the fee is merely $1—and whatever publicity there is in it for the star or the picture.

Inn keepers aren't too fond of foreign sophisticates who order a single bottle of champagne and then follow with French charged water. For it is a well-established fact—known to Europeans—that you get the same kick—almost the same taste—if after a drink or two of sparkling wine, you follow with Perrier water. And, of course, the fee is merely $1—and whatever publicity there is in it for the star or the picture.

Miss Sheila Barrett having im-

plished this reporter to please, please come to the Rainbow Room and grieve him into a fit over her satire on El Morocco. John Perona, Jerome Zerbe, Lucius Beebe, et al., smiled wanly when she saw him seated expectantly at a table. The reporter having enjoyed the dancing of Dario and Diane, the pianistic calisthenics of Helen Meyers, the fashion parade by the John Powers models, the magic of Dr. Sidney Ross and the dance music of Messrs. Al Donahue and Eddie LeBaron, sat back for the Big Moment. Miss Barrett fluttered her lily white hands and swished her presumably lily-white torso but Miss Barrett did not recite the Great Satire. Instead, still smiling wanly, she sent by liveried page boy the complete script of the satire for the reporter to read!

A Dash of Lemon Juice
A bit of lemon juice adds zest to many foods and food combinations that it is a shame it is not used more. It gives a delicious flavor to chicken croquettes, to almost any canned fish paste or salad, gives more flavor to a fresh fruit cocktail, is nice in French or mayonnaise dressing instead of the harder vinegar, gives a pleasing flavor to Waldorf salad and at the same time keeps the apples white, and is always welcome as a garnish on any seafood platter, either cooked or raw.

Social Bill Plankinton, sportsman and amateur camera expert, will probably shear his spear-head beard some day this week—after carrying the burden 18 months. He grew it originally in a wager with Bobby LaBranche—he had something to do with catching fish which Mr. Plankinton was the other night was his birthday. As a gift, LaBranche presented him with a tiny ivory pompano. "I have caught a fish at

How a Letter Writer Would Curb Speeders

Suggests Motorist Who Hits Person Witness Operation on Victim.

By Elsie Robinson

(Copyright, 1937.)

EVERWHERE, highways of death . . . clamorous with shrieks of agony . . . roaring with the murderous speed which hurls itself ceaselessly onward, unheeding.

If you had the power, what would you do about it? Here's Young America's answer to that tragic, urgent question. First, from Arthur Williams, hospital attendant in Boston, Mass., comes a suggestion which should cure speed mania if anything on earth can do so.

"Bring the speed demon into the hospital . . . let him see the ghastly horror for which he is responsible!"

"Come—we are ready—I am in my uniform at the wheel of the operating table. A young girl lies hideously broken before us. Bring in the man who did this . . . force him to watch!"

"Masked men stand around . . . the air is thick with ether—and fear. Listen—the girl's bloody lips stir. 'Mama!' A sob . . . a cry . . . the other does its merciful work. She is a young woman of many enthusiasms. She is an accomplished dancer, tap, toe and ballet, loves to dance, and is a devoted movie fan, but she is a serious minded small person, too. She wants most of all to write. On the school paper at Soltan she was motion picture reporter, and now, just for the fun of it, when she sees a picture play, she goes home and writes a review of it.

So though pretty hands might justify themselves alone by falling into graceful poses before the camera, she doesn't let them lead her into mischief as idle hands are said to do.

"That is my cure for speeditis."

"Arthur Williams, Boston, Mass."

And a thorough one, Arthur—which I wager would be effacious as any form of punishment, if we'd enforce it.

He is animated by his higher and finer ideals, but nearly always ruled by his little weaknesses and impulses. He is liable to do big splendid magnificent things—but spends most of his time doing little foolish, trivial things.

He has beautiful shining ideals about women and love, but somehow his ideals always "jam" the moment he gets near a pretty woman.

He builds glorious dreams about the flawless creature who inspires him—but spends his evenings with the shallow little person who amuses, tempts or flatters him.

He writes brilliant essays on the nobility of toil, and stops in the middle of an unfinished sentence to grab his hat when the telephone rings and he is invited to come out and play golf.

He resolves each morning to be calm, serene, tolerant and forbearing—but ends the day with a brain-storm because the soup is on the chilly side.

itation of the Skin May Cause Cancer

or Should Be Consulted Any Sore Spot in mouth.

By Clendening, M. D.

WE do not know the cause, it seems at first thought little absurd to talk about its formation, but there are a number of things which may precede a formation of cancer and many are instruments of its formation. These are irritants, blemishes of various chronic and repeated injuries.

commonest sites of cancer in the skin, especially of the hands, in the mouth, in the womb and in the canal. The prevention of the formation of the skin depends upon keeping blemishes.

commonest form of cancer skin is the easiest of all to cure, if taken early. It occurs in the form of little patches, usually in middle elderly people, and particularly those who are subject to skin.

of these little patches begin to bleed persistently and should be consulted at any skin blemish.

MRS. R. B.

My dear Mrs. Carr:
AM but one of your many readers,
but I have hopes that you will print my plea. We are a young couple, 19 and 20 years old, respectively, and were married almost two years ago. Five months ago my husband lost his job and due to inexperience and his age, has been unable to contact anything. I am unable to work myself as we are expecting a baby in early December. Latey the Welfare Association has very kindly given us help and they have treated us wonderfully.

When my husband lost his job we lost two rooms full of furniture, which was a real blow as we had been paying on it almost a year.
However, several persons came to our aid and lent us furniture until we could get our own. But the bed spring we have does not fit the lovely four-poster that was left us and if anyone has a double bed coil spring which they do not need,
I cannot express how very much I would appreciate it. The mattress is not mine and I feel honor bound to return it as soon as possible and I would appreciate a fairly good mattress, so that I would have a nice clean place to put a new baby
—our first baby.

I am sending good references,

among them our County welfare worker, and I am sure God would see and help those who might help

a deserving young couple in trouble.

Sincerely and hopefully,

MRS. R. B.

My dear Mrs. Carr: AM a boy 16 years of age and have designed a few dresses. I would like to know where I could sell them. Please answer through your column. Thanks.

E. F.

You do not make it quite clear whether you have done just the designs or have gone on and had gowns made from your designs. In either case, however, you will have to take your sample to the buyers of wholesale and retail shops and show them. If you feel you have something too original to take a chance of a copy, without a patent or copyright of your design, it would be well to get these first.
You can write to the Register of Copyright, Copyright Department, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C.

Dear Mrs. Carr: THINK the advice you give is great. Sometime ago I met a boy whom I don't know how to figure out. I have no big sister to consult and so I am coming to you.

When we are at parties, he gives me the "rush." The first time I met him he asked me to kiss him.
And also he has done this every time I have been with him since.
But he never has asked for a date or comes to see me.

On several occasions he has told my friends he intended to ask me for a date. Do you think he is sincere? Next time he is too attentive what shall I say.

Please tell me what I should do. I am 18, 5 ft. 3 in.

D. M. G.

I am sure your "big sister" would have told you to value your kisses more highly. It is evident that the young man sips his sweet quite lightly, "from flower to flower," without too much thought of any special blossom. Since you never have tried withholding this please-ant leave-taking, you may be sure he is not going to worry about seeing you or just how will earn it.
Do not take him seriously at all.
Probably he has never heard the line, much less felt, the tragic "Thy kiss has made me immortal."

The sculptured look has been heralded as something to achieve but thus far our hairdressers, massages and dressmakers have been decidedly languid in turning us out according to the prescribed pattern for the New Woman. Debutes, dowagers and all the rest of the fashion followers who call St. Louis their home are much too natural to compete in this exotic and exciting Style Parade. A few sculpted curls piled above the forehead, a girdled figure and a slinky dress represent only the beginning of the remodelled and refurnished figure.

Instead of discreet bands of sequins outlining the edges of a bolero jacket such as one finds advocated by our fashion emporiums, the eccentricities of fabrics and trimmings and the eccentricities of the silhouette, one New York retailer has gone so far as to beg for delivery.
He suggests that he and his contemporaries call a halt and tone down the blare of their trumpets else good taste be lost while women are striving to outdo each other in being alluring and expensive.

There's been much talk about the new fashions putting women back on a pedestal; the sculptured lines, the Grecian drapery and the rich fabrics indicating that. Certainly, as someone has facetiously remarked, the lacquered hair and the skin-tight sheaths resembling molten gold might look better in a museum than in polite society. The helmet hat, the coat of mail and the elaborately beaded epaulets are other accoutrements borrowed from another world but so eccentric in their interpretation that a gallant knight wouldn't know whether to cover the feet but to display bright trinkets adorning manacled toes.

The fever for metallic is running high and would be considered serious were it not for all of the jewels—real and synthetic—that make the glittering fabrics take second place. Simple little sweaters now boast their metal threads and even sturdy homespun must be tarnished salute or charge ahead.

In our work here, we often come across families who are in real need of clothing and food and who are ineligible for relief and this group, if so inclined, could help a lot in this work. At the present time I have two families in mind who are desperately in need of clothing for their children, ages ranging from 5 to 12.

These girls can reach me by phone—MAl 5280—Station 328 or 8th floor, Civil Courts Building, (mezzanine), 12th and Market streets.

Thank you and wishing you every success, I am.

Very truly yours,
Miss A. J. Tucker.
Deputy Probate Officer.

FASHIONS IN NEW YORK

St. Louis Writer Finds Manhattan's Styles Extreme'

THERE HAS BEEN MUCH TALK ABOUT THE NEW FASHIONS PUT-TING WOMEN BACK ON A PED-ESTAL.

By Sylvia Stiles

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.

A NY St. Louis man who thinks his wife's hats are too daffy, or who can't understand his daughter's slavery to clanking and gaudy bracelets needs a trip to Manhattan.

After he has strolled along Fifth avenue, noting the foxes and minks parade and blinked at the dazzling plaster mannequins in the shop windows, a visit to a night club or two where sequins grow on lips and lashes as well as backs of feminine guests will fix him up exactly right for a confession that St. Louis is a conservative town. At least, he will decide that the women folks of the Missouri metropolis are a sane and comparatively somber lot.

We've been saying that clothes for fall and winter are glamorous but we don't know how glamorous until one of those slyly creatures encased in gold cloth and bedecked with multicolored bracelets, clips, hair ornaments and gold log chains meets us face to face. We've been talking about the expensive impression created by metal thread frocks and metal gadgets but we don't know what expensive armor is until those coats of glittering mail flash by on their way to a "first night" or a popular cocktail bar.
As for the rampages of the foxes, the two-skimmers that have replaced the humble jonesons animals around the shoulders of St.
Louis women look like pikers in comparison to the luxurious capes, coats and swirling scarfs bedecking the swanky strollers.

The sculptured look has been

When Arline Judge was in high school she used to cry herself to sleep nights because the tall, handsome boys never asked her for dates.

OMIGOSH!

We can think of only one comparable description for Coach Allison's University of California varsity team and that is Kipling's, who in glorifying the heady, seductive Pisco punch said: "I have a theory it is compounded of cherub's wings, the glory of a tropical dawn, the red clouds of sunset, and fragments of lost epic by dead masters." Yes, that is the California varsity! — San Fran- cisco sports page.

And Gerald L. K. Smith now describes himself as a "Bible-readin', apple-pickin', wood-splittin' Amer- ican."

He shouldn't have omitted "rab- ble-rousin'."

College boys, this year, according to observers, are not as serious as were students during the depth of the depression.

Their spirits, however, are bound to follow the trend of the stock market.

Jim Tells Terry He Has Had Nothing to Do With the Sabotage at the Plant—She Realizes She Loves Him.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN.

JIM YORKE listened quietly. If he was conscious of the emotion in her voice as she spoke sometimes so hesitantly, sometimes words failing over each other in haste, he made no sign. He wasn't looking at her. He was staring at Keo stretched out at his feet.

Terry saw, though, that his shoulders were stiff, that the muscles in his neck were tight, and she noticed that his left hand was moving on the split oak of the chair arm, fusing with the bark that was there.

In his face she could read nothing, but then she so seldom could.

Terry's face wasn't the kind that was read easily, and yet it wasn't a face stolid to emotion. Rather, she thought now, a face that guarded his thoughts.

She had finished, and sat waiting, leaning forward a little in her chair, her lips parted, the tips of her fingers cold.

Still Jim said nothing, and still the tenseness remained in his body. She could sense it in him, and in Keo, too, for the dog wasn't lying relaxed, content, on the grass in his usual fashion.

To be sure he was lying down, but there was no laziness in his prone position. He was alert, too, his eyes wide open, looking up at Jim.

"Aren't you interested?" she asked at last.

"Tremendously." But he didn't move, neither did his fingers stop playing with the bark on the arm of the chair. One of Keo's ears jerked up.

That one word was uttered quite too quietly for Terry. She gave a little exclamation of exasperation.

"You might at least say something, you know, besides 'tremendously.' You might at least say a little interest!"

"But I am interested. I told you I was interested. What do you expect me to do—go into a dance or something?"

"You've just told me that a detective at the mills suspecte me of sabotage, and that he's found out from the Elizabeth plant that I'm not the Jim Yorke who worked there on the dates I was supposed to have worked. Right, isn't it?"

"Right," she echoed, although it seemed not the thing to say at all.

"Well, that's that. Thanks for telling me. I appreciate the information."

Did he mean that the subject was closed? Did he think that by thanking her for the information she herself had felt on hearing the news from Jim?

Did he consider that she was entitled to know whether or not the information held any truth at all? What did he think she was, anyway, a stone with no feeling, no compassion?

That was what was so hard about Jim Yorke. You felt him one moment that you knew him a little—only a little. You felt you understood him a little, and the next, he baffled you as much as ever.

Didn't he care that a private detective was investigating him? Didn't that mean anything to him at all?

She had expected action. She didn't know why. She had expected excitement, the excitement she herself had felt on hearing the news from Jim.

She had expected remonstrations, denials. Yorke wasn't acting at all in a normal way, the way he should.

"Thanks for telling me."

Those words spoken quietly, matter of factly. He might have been thanking her for his dinner tray—his tone had been the same many nights when she had brought you the tray. "Thank you for telling me."

"You might at least tell me whether or not it's true."

"True?" He was looking at her now, looking at her as calmly as if what she had been telling him concerned the June day, or the June night that was beginning to fall.

"Yes."

"What do you think?"

"Naturally I've been denying it to myself ever since I've heard it."

His eyes turned away from her, narrowed a little. He was looking at Keo again, stooping down to pat the golden brown head.

"But I most naturally expected you to deny it, too, to me," Terry pursued.

"Do deny it—if it will make you feel better. You certainly wouldn't relish having a criminal in your home." His words were crisp now, and back of the crispness was a bit of harshness. "Mr. Whelan is wrong but although you may believe me when I say that, he probably won't."

"But twice damage was done in the mill before you came!" Terry exclaimed eagerly.

"True, but then again twice damage was done in the mill when I was there. Your Mr. Whelan thinks of that."

"Your name, then, isn't Jim Yorke?"

"It's a good name, isn't it?"

"That's not answering my question!"

"It's as good a name as any, I should say. I rather like it. I've gotten used to it."

"Your credentials were false when you came to the mill?"

"That's what Mr. Whelan said, wasn't it?"

Oh, what was the use? Her shoulders shrugged discouragingly. Jim Yorke wouldn't talk. He had made up his mind not to talk, that was all.

When Terry moved away down the path to the kitchen a few minutes later, she knew something that she had not known when she came home.

TONIGHT under the oak tree in the gathering twilight, the line of demarcation between love and infatuation had become more sharply defined.

When she had walked up to the table and sat down opposite Jim Yorke the line hadn't been so clear. The two had merged together. Now they were separate. Love on the one side, infatuation on the other.

Definitely she knew when she entered the kitchen that she loved Yorke. And as definitely as she knew it, she knew, to that he didn't love her.

He didn't hate her as he had those few first days at the hospital when all the bitterness in his heart was thrust at her.

No, he didn't hate her. She thought he rather enjoyed her now, enjoyed her companionship. He accepted her, and the things she was doing for him. Further than that, he didn't consider her.

There never was an eagerness about him when she came up to him. Simply an acceptance of her presence. Tonight, true, he had commented because she had been late.

"You're late," he had said, but he couldn't have known the thrill that those words gave her these little words, the first really personal words he had spoken. "You're late."

She was hugging the words to her as she picked up his tray which Ada had ready. Greedy for if you are not satisfied.

A Powder Room Cleverly Attained

By Elizabeth Boykin

"Oh yes," the real estate agent added, "and there's a lavatory on the first floor, too!" But he failed to tell the prospect that it was small, cold and rather bleak and that if she had any ideas about a powder room she'd better forget them immediately. But, just as his client took the house—and because she's forthright and clever, that downstairs lavatory which seemed pretty hopeless has become a charming little corner of her home.

There wasn't much there to work with. The room was merely a closet with a tiny window. There wasn't room for an attractively gay dressing table and the plumbing fixtures were not of the latest design. The walls had tan trouble and the woodwork was dark and forbidding. It was, in short, a convenience but an eyesore. There were many other places in the new-old house that needed immediate and rather costly repair so that the budget did not allow for new plumbing fixtures or a bang-up decoration job in the lavatory.

First an evening or two was spent sandpapering the dark woodwork. Then woodwork and walls and the inside of the door were painted a deep, rich blue. Red and blue linoleum was placed on the floor. A red chenille cover was placed on the bowl seat. Red cording was tacked in loops around the molding with red tassels hanging down from every second loop. A red and white child's drum was used as shade for the ceiling light and the small window was curtained gaily with red-and-white striped percale.

Since lack of space prohibited any sort of dressing table, a mirror no longer in use was stripped of its frame, recut and screwed to the one available wall. Under the mirror a small glass shelf, its brackets painted red, served to hold powder, individual puffs and the like. A glass rack was attached to the back of the door for gay red and blue guest towels.

Of course, the obvious reason for the dark walls can be seen by any homemaker with small children. A downstairs powder room is apt to get a great deal of wear and tear from the younger members of the family. No smudged finger marks can show very much on dark blue walls yet the entire effect of this powder room is one of smartness and chic. And the cost was infinitesimal!

Sleeplessness Steals Beauty

This gentle bile-producer might help! Lack of sleep frequently etches needless lines into beautiful faces. Needless, because sleeplessness is often caused by constipation, as are also loss of appetite, mental dullness, nervousness, the aggravation of skin blemishes.

Keep regular. Don't let more than a day go by without proper elimination. Use Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. This famous laxative has been the choice of millions for decades. It is a natural system. It does not shock the intestinal system. Also, it stimulates the liver's natural process of bile without the discomfort of drugs or irritating drugs. Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at your druggist. 15¢, 30¢ and 60¢ everywhere.

*Your liver secretes from 20 to 30 ounces of bile every day to aid in the digestion of food and stimulate the action of the intestinal system. Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are helping to keep regular, contain an ingredient which especially assists in the secretion of bile. That is one of the reasons Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets have unsurpassed effectiveness.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Cremulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Cremulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed membranes. It is a germ-killer which expels the germ-laden phlegm.

Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Cremulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Cremulsion is one word—not words, it has power in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Cremulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want.

200 New York Mothers Begin Housing Strike

East Side Women Demand Better Living Quarters—Beseech Mayor.

By Alice Hughes

(Copyright, 1937.)

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—
TRIKES and the attendant picketing continue to harass, congeat and sometimes horrify our civic existence. Sometimes there are as many pickets as shoppers on Fifth Avenue, seems like. But the latest and strongest strike sent me scurrying down to our lovely little City Hall to see what the strikers would do to our peppy Mayor, "Little Flower" La Guardia!

This town's interest in window mannequins gets hotter daily. Lester Gabs, the designer, now takes his prize window-dummy,

Jean Muir, the pretty movie girl, who perhaps has too many beauties for big Hollywood success, has been trying to find a good Broadway play—but with no luck. So she's sailed away for England to appear in a new J. B. Priestley show.

Leaving our dramatic critic Dick Watts lone, lorn, and lamenting. He's had a case on her for ages.

Among our interesting newcomers is pretty Hermione Gingold, European big girl in stage, screen, radio. Her first trip our way. "If I were to advise a beginner on how to learn to act for the stage, films or radio, I'd urge her to study Shakespeare," she told me the other day. Very nice, too, and I shall write to Bing Crosby and Charlie McCarthy at once.

This town's interest in window mannequins gets hotter daily. Lester Gabs, the designer, now takes his prize window-dummy, beautiful Cynthia, to parties with him, and she's a great hit—probably because she's such a good listener. My stooge, on my weekly radio program, is a window mannequin named Grace, who comments tartly on the folk who pass her Fifth avenue station, and at present is suffering from a violent crush on Edgar Bergen's little wooden-headed boy. These gorgeous, silent wax-girls have all sorts of possibilities for the frivolous minded—lots of fun can be had with them, and they can't protest!

Cabbage Salad
Put into a bowl one cup shredded cabbage, one-half cup shredded lettuce, one-half cup chopped celery,

two tablespoons finely minced onions and two tablespoons minced parsley. Bind together with either mayonnaise or boiled dressing. Small side dishes.

ERIE ALSO HAS SERIOUS PROSPECT

Jesse Jones, Head of Government Agency, Understood to Have Told President of Situation—Costs Rise, Traffic Declines.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post Dispatch.
Copyright, 1937, Pulitzer Publishing Co.
NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—Two of the nation's major railroad systems are in such a precarious situation that bankruptcy within the next six months appears almost certain unless the Government comes to the rescue with large loans.

The facts are known not only to Wall Street, but the plight of the railroads—others are faced with a serious loss of revenue in 1938 as well as the two in question—is the cause of concern among administration advisers in Washington.

The two railroads that are threatened are the Baltimore & Ohio and the Illinois Central. At least one other, the Erie, will face a serious financial situation should its business not improve.

On Tuesday, Chairman Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation conferred for some time with the President. It is understood here that he impressed upon Mr. Roosevelt the jeopardy in which these and other lines have been placed by the admitted business "recession" that has taken place the last two months during which the burden of railroad operating costs has been very greatly increased. Jones strongly intimated as he left the White House that it would be necessary to make the lending power of the R.F.C. available to the railroads again.

Rapid Change in Month.

This dramatized the striking changes that have taken place in less than a month. For it was on Oct. 18 in his interim budget message that President Roosevelt announced that the R.F.C. would make no more commitments other than for administrative expenses. He said in the same message it was probable that many commitments now on the R.F.C. books would be canceled.

Regarded in the past as a barometer of business, the condition of the railroads has in recent years been more or less obscured. The whole complex structure of railroad finance has been shored up by Government credit. Beginning in 1929, the Government put out to 73 railroads a total of $532,126,239, of which $180,271,228 has been repaid.

For some time railroad authorities have been aware that this was merely a poutice applied to an illness far too deep-seated to respond to such superficial treatment.

Third of Mileage in Bankruptcy. Railroads with approximately one-third of the total mileage are now in bankruptcy. In the view of an authority having a broad background in railway finance, lines having another one-third of the mileage are not in a position to weather another prolonged depression, and most of them will have to go through bankruptcy unless there is unexpected prosperity. Roads operating the remaining one-third are making a profit.

In 1936 net railway operating income was more than $850,000,000. But since then additional costs have been added to railway operation, almost equal to this amount. Various specialists in Wall Street have estimated the total net railway operating income for 1938 as low as $200,000,000. This compares with $28,298,008 for 1932, the lowest year in recent railroad history, and the figure for 1929, $1,251,697,938. And for each of the three years preceding 1929 it went over a billion.

Petition by Railroads. In recent weeks there have been signs of the increasing seriousness of the situation confronting the railroads. A week ago (Nov. 5) the Class One roads filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a petition which declared that a 15 per cent increase in freight rates was imperative. Throughout the petition there are references to the "critical nature of the situation."
